Sikeston looking at urban renewal

The City Council Monday night authorized businessman Phil Barkett to begin working toward establishment of an urban renewal program in the city.

Voters rejected an urban renewal program Dec. 10, 1969.

Barkett said he felt voters made a mistake in turning the program down. "It's time to get rid of the substandard housing in Sikeston," he said.

City Attorney Manuel Drumm said the program is an excellent way for the city to obtain federal money to remove blighted areas and rebuild them.

Drumm said large-scale urban renewal programs have not been successful, but small tightly controled programs have been. Charleston was cited as an example of what a good urban renewal program can do.

Under the urban renewal program, the homes in blighted areas would be purchased and removed. The residents would be moved to a new location temporarily while new homes were being built for them under the program.

Barkett said he thinks everyone is entitled to a decent place to live.

"We send billions of dollars overseas to help clean up other countries," he said. "It's time we helped ourselves."

Money for urban renewal programs is expected to become available again in the fall.

Property owners in the Hunter Acres West Addition were present at the council meeting to express their opposition to rezoning 13 lots in the subdivision from single family to multiple family dwellings.

The developers are seeking to build duplexes in the area. Property owners are upset because no price restrictions are planned for the duplexes. Minimum prices have been set for homes built in the area.

The property owners say they have large sums invested in their property and they don't want duplexes that will bring down the value of their land. Fifty-eight property owners within a two-block area of the lots where rezoning is sought signed statement against the rezoning.

The lots being considered for rezoning are south of Salcedo Road between West Street and the Frisco railroad tracks.

The council ordered the proposal tabled until both groups can meet with the planning and zoning board to work out differences.

The city and the Sikeston R-6 School District signed a contract giving the school system a five- year lease on the Airport School facilities. The schools currently use the facilities but, because of the need for long-range planning, the board of education wanted to be sure it could keep the buildings. The school system received an option to renew the lease for five years.

The Rev. R. C. Martin, pastor of Smith Street Church of God, offered the city an option on a sanitary landfill site in the Stoddard County hills west of Sikeston. He told the council the site is closer to Sikeston than the Morley site.

Council members told the Rev. Mr. Martin to talk to the individual garbage collectors.

The council again became embroiled in a discussion over garbage collection.

Attorney Tony Heckemeyer, representing some garbage collectors, said the state will not accept the city's plan to allow individual collectors to pick up trash. He said the state wants the city to take the responsibility for picking up trash.

Drumm said the city will go with the individual collector plan until told to do otherwise.

Heckemeyer said collectors are facing problems trying to comply with the law. He said it would take $150,000 worth of equipment to service Sikeston and that none of the collectors has the financial power to pick up the whole city on short notice if it becomes necessary.

He said the collectors don't know whether to buy more equipment or not because nobody knows where we are going."

A liquor by the drink ordinance, which would declare the city's controls and regulations over establishments which would serve liquor by the drink if the proposal passes in the June 26 special election, was tabled until a future meeting, which will be held before the election.

In other action,, the council approved the condemnation of buildings at 209, 222 and 107 Alabama St.

The council approved the resurfacing of East Gladys Street from Selma to the dead end and the resurfacing of Westgate from Malone to Compress Road. The sole bidder for both jobs was McMullin Construction Co.

The council also approved the paving of Garwood Avenue from Edwards to the dead end. All three jobs will be paid for through tax bills.

The council decided it did not wish to change the residency requirement for city employes. The employes are required to live in the city, but two had asked permission to live outside town.

The council also turned down a chance to buy a fire truck on a monthly payment basis, deciding it would rather pay for the truck through a bond issue.

Draining bean field

Rain and water are again plaguing Sikeston area farmers, but fortunately to a more manageable degree. Monday night's hard thundershowers that brought .29 inch of rain in a short period of time sent Brewster Copeland into the soybean fields on the Jewel Blaylack farm to dig drainage ditches for the standing rainwater to run off the rows. The three- week- old beans are about three to four inches high on the Blaylack farm which is located along Highway 61 near McMullin.

Assault charges are filed

CHARLESTON— Charges of assault with intent to kill were filed Monday afternoon against Lucille Wilson, 48, of Route Two in connection with an assault Saturday on her common law husband, Andrew Phillips, according to Deputy Sheriff Mike Baughman.

Phillips, who was struck five times on the head and once on the left leg with a single- bladed ax, reportedly remains in critical condition in Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston.

Mrs. Wilson is in custody and will be arraigned Thursday before Magistrate T.J. Brown Jr.

Dexter council establishes four new sewer districts

DEXTER — Terry Howes of C. R. Trotter and Associates Engineering Firm of Dexter met with the city council Monday night to discuss plans for a proposedd sewer district.

The council passed ordinances establishing four new sewer districts: District No. 1, Sycamore Flats subdivision; District No. 2, Jibbins and Westview Acres; District No. 3, Dexter Creek Park addition and south to the railroad and District No. 4, the north half of the Norman survey and part of the Rainey addition west of One Mile Road.

Plans and estimated costs will be ready in three to four weeks.

City Attorney Paul McGhee reported on a meeting held to discuss how the city plans to spend its revenue sharing money for the period from Jan 1, 1973 to June 30, 1973. Mayor Willis Conner, Councilman Jack Smarr and McGhee attended the meeting. It was decided to spend $20,000 for the repaving of One Mile Road, $9,000 for the public library $13,000 for the park system and $11,537 to be allocated for public safety, such as police cars and firetrucks for a total of $53,537.

The council agreed to have Mayor Conner discuss with C. R. Trotter and Associates the estimated cost to construct two streets for entrance and exit to the city's industrial park. The Chamber of Commerce had suggested to Mayor Conner two streets extending from one Mile Road to Fram Road and from Arvin Road to Two Mile Road.

The council voted to send city policemen Kenny Whittington to the crime laboratory in Cape Girardeau from June 18 to June 20 for a short course in drug work and drug analysis at a cost to the city of $20 plus his expenses.

City Attorney McGhee reported on a meeting with the Public Service Commission in Jefferson City in which the commission ruled that $17,000 would be paid to install a railroad crossing on South Locust St. with 90 per cent to be paid by the railroad boxcar fund

Special election set for July 3

NEW MADRID—The city council Monday night scheduled a special election for July 3 when voters will be asked to approve a proposal for the leasing of docking and unloading facilities in St. Jude Industrial Park for a second 600 megawatt steam generating station.

The lease would provide for joint usage of existing facilities by the city and Federated Electric Cooperative, which will build a new station. The lease requires approval of the voters because the facilities are owned by the city.

The council heard a report from Buddy Waters of Waters and Associates Engineering Firm of Sikeston on proposed plans for drainage and storm sewers on Kingshighway, Riley Street and Dawson Road and for emergency pumping stations for use in time of flooding. Also discussed was extension of sewer lines to Billy Goat Hill residents in the southeast section of town. Preliminary estimates of the total cost is over $264,000.

The council also approved temporary permit for parking of a mobile home on a lot owned by Geneva York Stewart during the illness of her mother.

City administrator Don Lloyd was authorized to request the Army Corps of Engineers to reassume maintenance of the levee protecting the east side of town, which is in need of repair, due to slides and washed out areas.

A letter was read from Jessie H. Wilkins, commending police officer Russell Cobb for his promptness in arriving at the scene of an accident two minutes after being telephoned by Wilkins.

Appointment of Ronnie Adams as police officer was approved, and new lights were authorized for the tennis courts on Mill street.

Power plant construction payments totaling $63,385.95 for the city's 66 megawatt steam generating station in St. Jude Industrial Park were approved.

A request by William Baird on behalf of the service clubs of the city for permission for a fireworks display at the end of Main Street on July 4 was approved.

Venue change granted

DONIPHAN, Mo. (AP)— A change of venue was granted Monday in Ripley County Circuit Court for two Van Buren, Mo., men, charged with the Jan. 17 extortion- slayings of a bank president and two members of his family.

The change was granted for Jerry W. Rector, 22, and Lloyd D. Cowin, 20, after attorneys for both men cited extensive prejudice of the local residents. Rector and Cowin are charged with three counts of first- degree murder in connection with the shooting deaths of Robert Kitterman, 43, his wife and their daughter. Cowin will be tried in Springfield and Rector's case will be heard in Hillsboro. No trial dates have been set.

Dallas R. Delay, 33, who entered a guilty plea earlier, is currently serving the first of three consecutive terms of life in prison.

Kitterman, his wife and daughter were murdered after an extortion of the Bank of Grandin where Kitterman was president.

2 cyclists hurt

Laura Sherman, 4, of 937 Sikes Ave., the daughter of Sikeston High School Principal Roger Sherman, received a cut on the back of the head when she struck a passing car in the 900 block of Sikes.

Police said a car driven by Margaret Baker, 403 Pam, was passing the child in the northbound lane of Sikes when the girl swung her bicycle in a circle and struck the side of the car.

No arrest was made, according to police.

Perry Wayne Jolliff, 1604 E. Kathleen, received a cut on the right knee when his motorcycle ran into the side of a car which had turned in front of him about 8:45 p.m.

Police said Jolliff was westbound on East Malone Avenue when a car driven by Dora Cooper Vogel, 309 Circle Drive, made a left turn from the eastbound lane of Malone onto Mitchell Avenue. Joliff was unable to avoid hitting the car.

The woman was arrested for careless and imprudent driving.

LOOK, MA, DENTILLIUM FILLINGS

Forty million dollars worth of gold in the form of dental alloys went into the mouths of Americans last year. This represented about 4 per cent of the approximately one billion dollars worth of gold mined annually throughout the world.

Latest available statistics show that U.S. dentists used the yellow metal to complete an estimated 5.5 million gold inlays, 11.5 million single crowns and more than four million fixed bridges.

Despite the heavy demand for gold, a total of only 80,000 tons of it has been mined during recorded history — less than a single morning's output for the steel industry.

Gold has always been a scarce metal. Today, with widely fluctuating prices, the problem is particularly acute. Officially pegged at $42.22 an ounce, gold floats on the free market at between $75 and $85 an ounce.

The scarcity of gold has put a strain on all its users and led the dental profession, for one, to look for other metals. One gold alloy substitute that has been developed out of research conducted at the New York University School of Dentistry is a chrome alloy called Dentillium. Said to be equal or superior to gold for dental uses, it is presently being marketed by some 40 dental laboratories across the country.

Nonprecious alloys such as Dentillium will replace gold for crowns and fixed bridges in the next five to seven years, predicts H. L. Myers, president of Codesco, Inc., largest independent dental supply and laboratory company in the United States.

But at the rate Americans acquire dental ailments, there'll continue to be "gold" in them thar cavities for generations of dentists to come.

FOR KICKS, WATCH YOUR LANGUAGE

It's interesting how language changes, almost it seems from day to day, or at least between one edition of a dictionary and the next.

Take the word "decimate." Strictly speaking, if an army is decimated in battle it has lost one- tenth of its men. In common usage, however, the word has long meant almost total obliteration, whether of troops or of some other aggregation of living things, and this is one definition given in the Second Edition of Webster's international, published in 1934.

But even recognizing that no living language can remain static, it still comes as a bit of a jolt to see the word now being used to describe destruction in general.

For example, a recent article about the virtues of large cars versus small cars stated that the latter "would be decimated" in a crash.

Surprisingly, Webster's Third, published in 1966, has already given its blessing to this usage, citing as a sample sentence the act that inflation has "decimated" buying power.

To language purists, the whole thing is — well, decimating.

The Gardener's Ego

It started with a compliment from neighbors. They praised the inflation gardener and marveled at his ability to grow eggplants and broccoli. No one who inspected the backyard patch credited the plants themselves, the earth which sustained them or, most important of all, the weather.

There are enough such conversations during the growing season to supply most itinerant gardeners with a sense of invincibility. The unacknowledged fact, however, is that a good reputation for a green thumb is almost always built on the maligned reputation of the weather. When the cucumbers are stunted, the backyard analysts blame the weather but when the yield is prizeworthy it is usually he accomplishment of the grower.

The ritual is universal. When crops are poor in India, the weather is blamed first but when crops are good, the weather is usually credited last. Such a self-serving attitude has slandered the weather throughout history. Our own language is full negative connotations related to the word. A weather-headed person is foolish and a weather hen is an inconstant woman. We're not supposed to trust a weathery leader and are expected to sympathize with someone under the weather.

The list goes on and on (weather-wrung,-scarred, -eaten ... — but we hope this is sufficient to restore a pinch of respect for all the good things that are due to weather. Above all, it is important to beware the ego of the successful grower of a few strings of Kentucky Wonders out there in inflation gardenland.

Would you believe ... "an overpowering federal government has alienated large numbers of Americans and it could fall of its own weight it it is not decentralized." This warning was made not by a conservative Republican, but by Rep. Edith Green, a respected liberal Democrat whose views on education matters carry considerable weight with her colleagues in the House. A perceptive and articulate former school teacher from Portland, Ore., she spent her first 18 years in Congress on the House Education and Labor Committee and more recently moved to the House Appropriations Committee where she believes her influence over the federal education dollar will be even greater.

Mrs. Green believes that the Administration's educational revenue sharing proposal is a major improvement over the current categorical aid programs and will reduce federal involvement in education matters. But she is critical of several inconsistencies in Administration policy.

While the Administration is opposed to massive school busing, for instance, she points out that the Health, Education and Welfare Dept. has just requested an additional $23 million during the next two years to bus pupils not only within school districts, but also across city, county and state lines. Moreover, this money can be used to promote another favorite tool of those who seem to favor intergration over education: educational parks.

Also flying in the face of the President's interest in decentralizing the federal bureaucracy, she stresses, is the establishment of a computer system at the U.S. Office of Education that will help the agency set national standards for federal scholarship aid.

"The Administration is establishing national standards for student aid," states Mrs. Green, "and taking away from college student aid officers their making decisions on how much students will get.

"No allowance is to be made for different costs of living throughout the United States. Information on student and family finances will be put through the computer. One contractor told me it will take five million pounds of paper to distribute the final information to students and colleges."

Another reason Mrs. Green has grown wary of the growth of the federal bureaucracy is based on her probing of the U.S. Office of Education's contracts and grants division. She has found that only 10 per cent of the contract money is awarded through competitive bidding, while much of the rest is handed out to cronies and such nonsensical projects as a $24,540 grant to the Maharishi Mahesh Yogi to train teachers in the Science of Creative Intelligence and Transcendental Meditation.

She has also found kick-backs, conflicts of interest and the curious habit of HEW personnel working on a contract or grant application, approving it and shortly thereafter leaving the government to work for the recipient's company at a fat salary.

Not only is she critical of the education bureaucracy, but Mrs. Green is less than laudatory about actions taken by the Education and Labor Committee. She believes this House unit has been instrumental in centralizing power in Washington. She says:

"It takes tremendous amount of arrogance to sit on the committee and presume to know all the problems of education; to think that it can select the priorities and that the Office of Education can issue uniform guidelines and regulations, whether or not they fit local conditions.

"This leads to the 'let Washington do it' attitude at the local level and to apathy, ineptness and outright corruption. Some local officials and people don't realize the ineptness and outright medicocrity and corruption at the federal level.

"The government will fall of its own weight if it is not decentralized. Alienation and the feeling that they can't do anything about the government has spread across a wide spectrum of the American people."

HISTORY OF DRUGS II

Opium and marijuana provided two acceptable alternatives to alcohol for Moslems. Even today most Moslem countries accept marijuana and outlaw alcohol.

For centuries opium had been known and valued as a killer of pain and a source of delight. By 3000 B.C. it was found in Sumer; and around 2000 B. C. in the Aegean area. Cyprus was shipping opium to Egypt around 1500 B. C.

The pharmacopoeia of the legendary Chinese Emperor Shen Nung, said to date from 2737 B. C., notes medical uses of opium, marijuana, and tea. Marijuana was prescribed for gout, rheumatism, and malaria, beri- beri, constipation, female weakness, and absent - mindedness.

In the 5th century B. C., the Greek historian Herodotus recorded events and customs associated with drugs.

Reports of the use of betel — a mild stimulant found throughout Southeast Asia — date back to centuries before Christ. It continues to be common there, as chewing gum is in America. The user chews a quid made of a betel leaf wrapped around a cracked nut of the areca palm, slaked lime and assorted flavorings.

Kola nuts, the source of the stimulent (caffeine) used in cola drinks, have been chewed throughout West Africa for centuries. The first written records of use date back to the 13th century.

Ancient peoples in both the Old and New Worlds may have used mind- altering mushrooms. The Indian text Rig Veda (1500 B.C.) contains more than 1,000 hymns to Soma, an unidenfied plant worshipped as a god and forming the center of an elaborate cult. Recent findings indicate that Soma may be the hallucinogenic mushroom Ananita muscaria.

Plus For Eagleton

The Senate's vote on Thursday was a landmark in the agonizing involvement of the United States in the affairs of Indochina. The tally was 63 to 19 in favor of eliminating all funds for the American bombing of Cambodia and Laos, and it followed approval of a weaker but similar provision in the House May 10. If the stricture can be sustained in conference, and if President Nixon signs the ensuing legislation, American military activity would have to cease in the two countries during the fiscal year ending June 30 (after which additional votes might become necessary). Sentiment in Congress appears strong enough to override a possible presidential veto.

Credit on this issue is due Senator Eagleton of Missouri, who sponsored the funds cut-off provision as an amendment to a 3.7 billion dollar supplemental appropriations bill. Against the background of continuing illegal and immoral American bombing in Cambodia Mr. Eagleton told the Senate: "The Administration is insulting our intelligence. Its legal position is a sham and, in my opinion, represents an effort to circumvent the legislative power of Congress." Two thirds of the Senate rejected the worn-out argument of Administration apologists that enactment of the prohibition would hamper U.S. peace efforst.

Mr. Eagleton and his colleagues realized that the only way to stop the bombing and get out was to cut off funds. It was a great day, long awaited.

POWs AND AIR STRIKES

Returned U.S. prisoners of war stood and cheered recently during a party at the White House when mention was made of the B- 52 air strikes against Hanoi last December. One former POW said he knew the minute the heavy bombs started falling on the communist capital of North Vietnam that he and his comrades would be freed soon and would be returning home. It was a striking tribute to the United States and its power. That power had gone unused far too long. When the decision was made to go into Indochina and fight communist forces there we should have used more force and brought our enemy to its knees in the early stages. Political considerations by various administrations stopped us short of winning.

Meanwhile, our men were fighting and dying and many were being captured and tortured by the communist foe. There seemed no hope of getting them out except by force and once the decision was made to punish the enemy the bombers did ther jobs. Hanoi was ready to talk and return the prisoners. All citizens who saw the touching scenes as the freed prisoners returned shall never forget them.

The United States must never use its muscle in aggression strikes. Our retaliation should be swift and sure, however, when our people and the security of our nation are at stake. The world applauds a firm stand in the cause of right. That is what happened when North Vietnam felt the weight of our bombs. Above all, the change in policy got our men home safely.

It will take us, as a nation, a long time to digest the lessons of the war in Indochina. The digestion will not be easy. If we are to survive in the future, we must take those lessons to heart and strengthen our foreign policy so that there will be no more settlements of the Korea and Indochina types. HLH

Inside Labor

by Victor Riesel

Rocky Loves Pete: Rockefeller Reported Developing National Surrogate Network for '76 Race

NEW YORK— In the jargon of Broadway, the hottest ticket in town is an invitation to Nelson Rockefeller's June 12 reception to labor leaders at a local inn--- with a card enclosed announcing that Secretary of Labor Peter Brennan will be there.

There are several matters of import and impact here. It appears to insiders that Gov. Rockefeller and Pete Brennan are becoming each other's fond surrogates. Both appear to need each other. Both appear to have their eye on the White House--- the governor as President and the Labor Secretary as his strong right hand.

It is significant that Rocky is featuring Pete at this moment when the governor's old friend, labor's chief of chiefs, George Meany, continues inexorably to go for Brennan's political jugular.

There was, for example, that moment the morning of May 23 in Washington's Sheraton Park Hotel when Meany, having the time of his long life, told a loudly laughing audience of unionized glass bottle blowers that Brennan was a "dummy." And reaching back into his (Meany's) encyclopedic knowledge of vaudeville lore, the AFL— CIO president called the member of Mr. Nixon's cabinet an Edgar Bergan and Paul Winchell rag-doll mouthpiece for the President and the Office of Management and Budget in Particular and "the other side" in general.

It was a razor ripping talk. Brennan was referred to as "a fellow who used to carry a union card." Which meant that Meany was reading out of the movement this former president of New York's powerful Building and Construction Trades--- and still a member of the painters union.

But New York labor--- and some finances, history has it--- are the bases of Gov. Rockefeller's strength here and across the land. The governor is determined not to permit Brennan to be tarred. First, out of personal affection ("I love Pete," Rockefeller says regularly), and second, Brennan and his hard- hat constituency have withstood Meany's triphammer assaults.

Thus, Brennan is honored at a Black Trade Unionists dinner dance of the 1.2 million member city Central Labor Council and at the June 12 reception as well as the June 14 State Republican dinners spilling over two hotels.

Nor is the President retreating under Meany's buzzsaw derision. Just the other day one White House image- making specialist conferred with Brennan on how to gild himself and the Labor Department. Handsome Peter called in the women's lib and equal rights leaders and charmed them. And he is a charmer, what with the tenor voice, the prematurely snow-white hair and a disarming Irish winsomeness unmatched in the capital.

So the ticket to the June 12 indoor picnic is "hot." And scarce. Of course, everybody will crash. Everybody knows that Rocky is going for broke--- and that will take some doing--- not merely in his race for a fith gubernatorial term in '74 but for the presidency in '76. And lots of the labor men want to be at the head of the still imaginary White House reception line that far off inauguration day in January 1977. This is their thinking.

They have heard that, early as it is, Gov. Rockefeller is building his national network and gathering his surrogates. Not the least of these will be Peter Brennan--- who has wowed them here, in Jacksonville, in Milwaukee and the West Coast though he's less an orator than anyone since A. Lincoln read something off an envelope at Gettysburg.

Slowly the national labor machine is being built. More and more, Rockefeller's people are being encouraged to go beyond state borders.

There is a feeling that the governor might recoup the support of such men as Sen. Barry Goldwater who was his close friend and supporter away back in 1963. They met then and talked long and often before they broke over an issue which was deeper than that which surfaced. Rockefeller has moved into the center and a little to its right, too. And there is Ted Agnew who, as Maryland's governor, once was Rockefeller's surrogate for labor. Some inept handling lost him Agnew. More improbable occurrences have developed recently than a Rockefeller-Agnew alliance.

And almost completely overlooked is an exchange of letters between Messrs. Nixon and Rockefeller. On Feb. 22, the President wrote the governor a "Dear Nelson" letter, referring to the New York State Study on the Role of the Modern State in a Changing World, "I would invite you to broaden your inquiry into a National Commission which would look to the future of America in its Third Century. I would appreicate your organizing such a National Commission which would be bipartisan and broadly representative of all Americans. I would also request that you report periodically to me and to the Congress the Commission's findings and recommendations."

Mr. Nixon then named Anne Armstrong (counsel to the President) to serve as liaison. And some financing.

In reply, Rockefeller wrote that the "concept of expanding this Study on the Future of America in its Third Century is tremendously exciting." He said he would broaden the commission into a national group. And that he would report regularly to the President and the Congress on "political, economic, social and military developments." This would carry him through to the bicentennial in '76 and the 200th anniversary, in 1989, of the Constitution.

Certainly this could keep Gov. Rockefeller (if he is reelected in '74) periodically in the national headlines for years--- the right years.

Rockefeller's letter was written, please note, as recently as May 3. And signed with "warm personal regards." It could be that the governor may have a President as surrogate, too. And that's why Pete Brennan's people are talking of staying on in the administration for another seven years.

And the June 12 ticket is hot.

Martha: Night of the Needle

WASHINGTON — A lot has happened since Martha Mitchell complained last June 23 that a security guard had ripped her telephone out of the wall and had inoculated her indelicately in the derriere.

For close to a year, witnesses have kept silent about the incident. But in the wake of the Watergate revelations, the new spirit of confession has now loosened their tongues. We have learned, at last, the details that housewives have been hounding us for.

The implication of their inquiries has been that poor Martha knew too much and was shup up by Republican security guards. The truth is less sinister. Martha Mitchell is a delightful, if loquacious lady. She has color and sparkle and a sense of humor. But she sometimes becomes volatile when she drinks too much.

This was her condition on June 23 in Newport Beach's Newporter Hotel on the California coast. As she became more shrill, her security guard, Steve King, tried to calm her. She screamed that he was holding her prisoner and lunged for the telephone to call for help.

YANKS OUT PHONE

King was worried that, in her condition, she might reach a reporter and say something that would embarrass her later. So he yanked the telephone cord out of the wall while she was talking to UPI reporter Helen Thomas.

Martha became violent, assaulting the furnishings. Once she slashed the air was a karate swing and her hand crashed through a window pane. The broken glass cut her hand deeply, increasing her hysteria.

King summoned the hotel doctor, but Martha refused to let him look at her hurt hand. To quiet her, King pinned her down while the doctor gave her a tranquilizer shot. It had little immediate effect on the agitated Martha, who continued to rave. At one point, she wrapped a washrag around her hand to stop the bleeding but still wouldn't let the doctor treat it.

The harassed security guard, meanwhile, decided Martha Mitchell was more than he could handle. So he phoned her husband, ex-Attorney Gerneral John Mitchell, in Washington and gave hin a blow-by-blow account of the altercation.

CALL TO KALMBACH

Immediately, Mitchell placed an urgent call to President Nixon's personal attorney, Herb Kalmbach, who happens to live in Newport Beach. Mitchell asked Kalmbach, as a personal favor, to hurry to the hotel and take charge of the situation.

When Kalmbach arrived, he found Martha still at full lung power, a blood-soaked washrag around her hand, protesting that she was being held prisoner. He finally got her calmed and brought in his own doctor to examine her hand.

Martha Mitchell got her hand stitched, spent the next day with the Kalmbachs and then flew to New York for a few days of seclusion at the plush Westchester Country Club.

John Mitchell, meanwhile, discussed the incident with the President, who was understanding and agreed Mitchell should leave the campaign to straighten out his marital problems. The former attorney general may also have felt the Watergate developments closing in on him. But Watergate was not mentioned, according to knowledgeable sources, as his reason for resigning.

— WASHINGTON WHIRL —

INDIAN MEDICINE: Two militant Indian leaders appeared the other day at the Interior Department, the citadel of the white bureaucracy they have been warring against. They had been invited by Interior Secretary Rogers Morton to present their views. The conscientious Morton, who is slowly recovering from cancer, impressed the Indians with his sincerity. At the end of the interview, LaNada Boyer, a Bannock-Shoshone, quietly pulled from her purse twigs of cedar. Burning cedar is the age-old Indian ritual for good health. As Morton nodded appreciatively, the Indian woman fanned the fragrant smoke toward him, saying softly, "This is for your health."

SHORT MEMORIES: The nation's militant conservationists sometimes have memories as short as their tempers. One of the Senate's most tireless fighters for the environment has been Frank Moss, D-Utah, who has sponsored every major air and water pollution bill that has passed in the last 15 years. He has also cosponsored the Wilderness Act, the Wild Rivers Act and the Outdoor Recreation Act. Now, however, Moss has backed measures to allow a water back-up from Lake Powell that will increase the water beneath Rainbow Bridge National Monument. Although it is dubious that the water would structurally damage the bridge, Moss is being nastily attacked by some of his fair-weather friends in the environmental movement.

EAVESDROPPING EXEMPTION: The telephone of Defense Department employes are subject to eavesdropping at any time. The Civilian and military employes can only grit their teeth and swear: They must accept the snooping as a condition of employment. But recently, Brig. Gen. F.H. Cutrona, the Pentagon information director, announced in a memo that 42 of the thousands of Pentagon phones would be "exempt" from surveillance. These are the phones of reporters in the Department of Defense press room. Now that reporters have been assured their phones are tap-free, they expect a flood of officers asking to use them to make personal calls.

NEW YORK AP - Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

While performing his most onerous morning chore, the average man shaves off 27½ feet of whiskers in his lifetime

If you are chronically impatient, you pay a price. "He who sows hurry reaps indigestion," wrote Robert Louis Stevenson.

When it comes to supporting governments, it isn't the initial expense it's the upkeep that costs. Of every dollar you now pay in federal income taxes, 17 cents goes simply to pay the interest on the national debt.

You are wrong if you are among the millions of Americans who think Sitting Bull was the Sioux leader who defeated Custer and his men in Battle of the Little Bighorn in 1876. Sitting Bull actually was a medicine man who saw no frontline. action. Most historians give Chief Crazy Horse major credit for the Indian victorn.

The growning shortage of gasoline and oil may force a revival of one of America's most popular forms of transportations in the past — the trolley car. While streetcars are still common in a number of cities, they remain in only six in the United States — San Francisco, New Orleans, Philadelphia, Boston, Pittsburgh and Newark, N.J. Probably no more than 500 trolley cars remain.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Consumer interests slashed with banking interests and the House battled the Senate Monday in the Missouri Legislature.

However, after an hour of heated debate, floor fights over amendments and a disputed voice vote, it was unclear who won. Final action on a banking bill that sparked the debate was delayed.

"Although we must be aware of the pleas of the bankers, we must also be aware of the good of the people," said majority floor leader Kenneth Rothman, D-Clayton.

The hassle came over an amendment to a Senate bill, sponsored by Sen. Albert M. Spradling, D-Cape Girardeau, to allow banks to provide loan services at their drive-in facilities.

Rothman widened the issue when he attempted to add an amendment to revise the state's controversial "holder-in-due-course" laws.

The present holder-in-duecourse laws allow a bank or credit company to buy contracts from sales firms without taking responsibility for defects in the products or services sold by the companies.

Although one representative called the amendment a "bludgeon tactic" to force the Senate to accept the holder-in-due-course revisions Rothman said his measure was a "real consumer's bill."

Rothman said even when some companies have gone bankrupt, the banks can still collect from consumers under present laws.

A bill similar to Rothman's amendment was passed by the House 145-9 in February. It was sent tothe Senate, and referred to the banking and financial institutions committee.

Spradling, who is a banker himself and who has sponsored several banking bills this session, is chairman

Additional interchange called for

DYERSBURG, Tenn. — A justification study calling for an additional interchange on Interstate 155 that will connect Tennessee with Missouri via a new Mississippi River bridge in Dyer County, has been completed by design engineers of the Tennessee Department of Transportation.

The proposed interchange is located at the main line Mississippi River levee in West Dyer County and would provide a direct route north to Lake County and Reelfoot Lake from the Missouri bootheel.

Commissioner of Transportation Robert Smith said, "We have hopes that our request for this interchange will be accepted this time. Our study, which includes a design and full feasibility study will be submitted immediately to the divisional office here in Nashville for approval. From there it will go to the regional office in Atlanta, and finally to the Federal Highway Administration in Washington."

He said, "We should have an answer on the interchange in about three months."

Lake, Dyer and Obion countians in Tennessee and residents of the Missouri Bootheel, began renewed efforts to seek the interchange last January Percy Smith of Tiptonville, T. C. Stutts, Dyer County court chairman, and Horace Dunagan of Caruthersville spearheaded the movement.

Residents of the area had been under the impression that the super highhway would have two interchanges between the river and Dyersburg. When construction began, they realized that final plans called for only one at Lenox.

Missouri residents charged the bridge would become a one way bridge into Tennessee without another interchange.

They pointed out that the gravel road atop the levee is used extensively by Tennesseans who live in western areas of Dyer and Lake counties and by Tennesseans and Missourians traveling back and forth to the Bootheel.

All groups involved declared the interchange was necessary to encourage tourist traffic to Reelfoot Lake in Lake County and business traffic to Missouri. They said that without the interchange, 15 miles would be added to a trip to Lake County from Caruthersville.

Dyer County court chairman T. C. Stutts said Monday, "The recent Mississippi River flood that marooned many persons near the levee, pointed to the necessity of an interchange at the levee. If there had been a good floodproof road for our people, they could have gotten out of the flood water safely."

The original request for the interchange made by Tennessee was turned down in 1967.

Commissioner Smith, who ordered the new justification study made, said his office and Gov. Winfield Dunn were interested in the interchange prior to local residents asking for the request to be renewed.

"Lake County depends a great deal on tourist business for its total economy and we think it needs the interchange," he said. "If the interchange is granted, its construction will not interfere with the work going on at present."

Farris-Backfisch

BENTON — St. Denis Catholic Church was the setting the afternoon of May 5 when Miss Mary Louise Backfisch became the bride of Thomas Howerd Farris Jr. in a double-ring ceremony performed by the Rev. Raymond Kunkel.

The church was decorated with pink and white carnations. Miss Denise Schlosser was organist, and Miss Debbie Urhahn sang.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Backfisch of Benton and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Howerd Farris of Olive Branch, Ill.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, appeared in a high-waisted gown of white satin with flowered lace bodice and chapel-length train. She carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations.

The bride's sister, Miss Joyce Backfisch, was maid of honor, and Mrs. Rodney Miller, also a sister of the bride, was matron of honor.

Bernon Backfisch, brother of the bride, was best man, and Miller was groomsman. Ushering guests were Paul Backfisch and Sylvester Backfisch, brothers of the bride.

A reception followed the ceremony at the St. Denis school hall, and a dance was held later that day at the American Legion Hall. At the reception, guests were served by the Misses Anna, Helen, Laura, Nancy and Laverne Glastetter, Miss Kathleen Heisserer and Miss Ruth Ann Backfisch. Miss Backfisch also attended the guest book.

Ann Landers

Father fed up with hearing complaints of 'bad' parents

Dear Ann Landers: Here's an open letter to all you kids who are mad at your parents because they didn't give you enough love when you were growing up. (Some of you "kids" are 30 years old.) Your psychiatrist told you (for $40 an hour) that your parents are to blame for messing you up--- that they were too busy making money or being community big shots. A hired woman fed and dressed you. You weren't rocked enough, or breast- fed. Or your parents had a bad marriage. They yelled at each other and you got bad vibes.

How do you account for all the kids who grew up on the street, never knew a decent meal, no silverware on the table, father a drunk, mother a barfly, yet they made it just fine--- without psychiatric help. Many of these so- called "neglected" kids are leaders in business, politics, education, art, music--- wherever you look.

I am so fed up hearing kids blame their parents for everything that I could throw up. I am waiting for the day when they have kids of their own. Let's see how well THEY turn out--- Your Good- For-Nothing Father

Dear Father: You didn't ask for any advice, but I have an idea you should have grabbed a few of those $40 sessions for yourself. You sound deeply disappointed in your children and worse yet, seething with anger. Obviously you've been hurt and rejected and it shows. Maybe it's not too late for you to get some self- understanding. I recommend it.

Dear Ann Landers: I would like to reply to the person who sent that Credo For Salespeople. It made every clerk in this store hopping mad. After all, we aren't ALL ignorant, unresponsive, indifferent and moronic. Granted, one out of ten salespeople just might fit that description, but I can tell you from experience that the chances for getting a pain- in-the- ankle customer are better than 50- 50.

Here is my list of salesmen's greivances. I'll bet no store manager will have this credo framed and hung, but I'll feel better for having written it.

1. Please don't try to get a clerk's attention by snapping your fingers, whistling, or pulling at his or her sleeve.

2. Please don't let your children run loose in the store, screaming like banshees, knocking over stacks of cans, breaking and soiling merchandise. If you can't discipline them, leave them at home.

3. Merchandise is sealed for YOUR protection. Please don't rip it open. Would you buy a jar with a broken seal? Well, neither would anyone else.

4. At present I work at a supermarket checkout counter. I say "thank you" to every customer. One person out of twenty responds.

I could go on indefinitely, but these are for openers. Let's hear it for the Sales Clerks of America. Every day we have to put up with screaming kids, shoplifters, non- English-speaking customers, and sourpusses like that clown who wrote to you. No hint as to where this letter came from, please, Ann. I need my job. Sign me--- Other Side Of The Counter

Dear Side: Never let it be said that I didn't give both sides of the counter a fair hearing. You've made some valid points and I thank you for writing.

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How To Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50c in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self- addressed envelope to this newspaper.

What's the Law?

The case of the beaned dingdong

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Luckless Looey didn't fare too well at a County Fair. Ambling past a baseball pitching concession, he fell victim to a hurler who was attempting to dislodge some helpless dolls sitting on a rack 25 feet down an alleyway. Winding up like he was waving a shillelagh instead of getting ready to pitch a baseball, he reared to the rear and, as he brought his hand back to fire the baseball, he clonked hapless Looey on the noggin as the latter walked by.

"Some precaution should have been taken," complained Looey in court, "to prevent people from being knocked over instead of the dolls.."

"No precaution was necessary," retorted the concessionaire. "The only reason Looey got clobbered was because he was a dingdong. Had he kept his eyes peeled, he wouldn't have gotten beaned and there'd been no lawsuit. The fault was with him and not with me."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you hold the concessionaire liable for Dingdong Looey's beaning?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that considering the national popularity of baseball as a sports warrants the conclusion that even a 9- year- old lad is aware of the danger attendant to his remaining in proximity to persons throwing baseballs. Under the circumstances, concluded the judge, while the accident was perhaps foreseeable and certainly of a type possible, its probability of occurrence was not so great as to render the operator of the baseball concession negligent for failing to take measures to prevent its happening.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

At least six persons died in Missouri traffic accidents Monday.

An Overland Park, Kan., family of three was killed Monday afternoon in a four-vehicle accident on U.S. 59 about 10 miles north of Oregon, Mo. The highway patrol identified the dead as David T. Burke, 24, his wife, Sharon, 25, and their 3-year-old daughter.

The patrol said a semi-trailer truck went out of control and struck the Burke automobile head-on.

A 7-year-old Barling, Ark., girl, Pauline Roberts, was killed Monday afternoon in a two-car collision in Kansas City North.

The girl's mother, Patricia Lufkin, 37, Barling, Ark., was injured in the crash and reported in fair condition at a North Kansas City hospital.

Harvey Rosenberg, 44, Olivette, Mo., was killed in a one-car accident on Highway 67 about 12 miles south of Fredericktown. The patrol said his car apparently skidded out of control and off the road during a rainstorm.

Donald Laven Dooley, 56, Aurora, Ill., died in a two-truck collision six miles west of Chillicothe.

Hamra, Francis pitch wins

In Jr. Babe Ruth play Monday night, the Eagles came from behind to take Davis & Bird 7-6 and Home Materials blasted Nowell 14-1.

The Eagles picked up the lead during the second inning of play and held on to it despite the threats of Davis & Bird. Failing to score, the Eagles fell two runs behind as D & B rallied to bring five runs across the plate during the fourth. It was a battle between the two teams, but the Eagles had the win, scoring their three runs in the sixth. Mike Hamra pitched the win and Larry Keller had the loss. Bob Leible for the Eagles and David Shell for D & B both had doubles.

Homer Materials bombed Eddie Nunnelee for eight runs in the first inning for a comfortable lead which carried them to the win. Nowell managed to squeeze out a single run, but after that all bats were quieted. Home Materials did not score again until the fourth bringing across an additional six to give them a big advantage. Don Francis showed fine pitching talent as he held Nowell to a single run and only two hits. Kevin Laseter had the only extra base hit of the game with a triple.

Wins scored

Deen pitched Budweiser to a 9-2 win over the Eagles and Ziegenhorn took a 8-6 decision over Learue McKinney Monday night in Sikeston Fast Pitch Softball League.

The Eagles found the hitting to be tough against the throwing arm of Deen. The hits were not coming and the Eagles could not score on Budweiser. Thompson had the loss for the Eagles.

The second game was a tight one, but it was Ziegenhorn to pull out the win. Hahs was the winning pitcher and Jerrell had the loss.

Foreman in bout

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — George Foreman's first pay day as heavyweight champion of the world is scheduled Sept. 1 in Tokyo when he meets littleknown Joe "King" Roman of Puerto Rico.

The undefeated 24-year-old boxer from nearby Hayward received $375,000 on Jan. 22 when he upset Joe Frazier with a second round knockout to claim the title. His next purse probably will be double that amount, his trainer and manager, Dick Sadler indicated Monday.

Sadler and Foreman will probably go to Japan next month to sign final contracts and settle the amount of the purse. Sponsors have put up $2 million, which includes money for a second title fight on the same program, but have given no breakdown of how it will be split.

The other championship bout at the 15,000-seat Budokan Hall will be between Mexico's Ricardo Arredondo, World Boxing Council junior lightweight titleholder, and Japan's Morito Kashiwaba. The heavyweight fight will be televised throughout the world via satellite beginning at 11 p.m., EDT.

Sadler said that Foreman will begin light workouts this week in an Oakland gym, "shaking loose to stay in shape."

The champ has fought only exhibitions since Jan. 22 and his weight, 218, for the Frazier fight, is up to 235.

"He'll be down to 218 for the Roman fight," Sadler promised.

Roman is ranked as the No. 10 contender by the WBC. Most of the higher ranked heavyweights, including Frazier, Ellis, Muhammad Ali, Ken Norton, Joe Bugner and Ron Lyle, already have fights scheduled this summer.

Five golfers represent area

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Two golfers from St. Louis will be among the five who will represent this area in the U.S. Open Golf Tournament.

The St. Louis golfers are Joe Dodich and Jim Cochran, both pros. Dodich, with a one-underpar 69 on his second round, led area qualifying for the five places Monday with a 36-hole total of 142. He had a morning 73.

Cochran posted a 74-70—144 for the fourth spot. Qualifying between the two St. Louis golfers were Rocky Waitt of Wichita, Kan., and Stan Thirsk of Kansas City. Waitt shot a 6974—143 and Thirsk 72-71—143.

John Frillman of Omaha, Neb., who tied at 145 with amateurs Tom Sieckmann of Millard, Neb., and Brent Buckman of Kansas City, gained the fifth spot by shooting a birdie on the first extra hole in a playoff.

The competition was held over the par 35-35—70, 6,200yard Indian Hills Country Club. Rain delayed play for 1½ hours.

Those failing to qualify included:

Mets injured

So would the New York Mets.

Jones and Grote are currently on the list while Milner and Mays are recent removals, although Mays has yet to see action since coming off.

It was the fifth consecutive defeat for Jon Matlack, 2-8. The Rookie of the Year in 1972 hasn't won since April 28. Nor has he escaped the injury bugaboo. He suffered a hairline skull fracture when hit by a line drive last month and missed a couple of starts.

Ryan, Fabick are victors

In Monday night American Little League action, Ryan bombed Ziegenhorn 17- 4 and Fabick withheld First National Bank to take the win 7- 6.

Polley, the hard throwing right- hander for Ryan, displayed fine pitching talents in his game against Ziegenhorn. The losing pitcher was Rowe. Despite the loss, Ziegenhorn's team had the only extra base hit when Anderson hit a homerun.

The second game was one for sluggers as five doubles, one triple and three homeruns were hit. After a slow start, Fabick picked themselves up and begin swinging. Holding a 7- 0 lead, Fabick had to cope with a rally from First National during the last inning, but First National was stopped after scoring six and had to take the loss. Self was the winning and King the losing pitcher. The doubles were by Self and Harper of Fabick with Swinney King and Wrathers hitting for First National. Harper also had the only triple. Merrideth, swinging for Fabick, had their homerun and it was Frankum and Wrathers hitting one each for First National.

Semo play

Sikeston downed Vanduser 8- 2 Monday night in SeMo Softball League action. Blair proved to be a little too tough for the Vanduser team, as they gained only three hits off of him compared to Sikeston's 11 hits off of Gilland. The Sikeston team is sponsored by Security National Bank.

Nastase is tennis wizard

PARIS (AP) — They've called Ilie Nastase a tennis wizard, a clown, a prima donna and just plain "Nasty." But today, he could prove himself to be the world's No. 1 clay court player.

The tournament at Roland Garros Stadium is rated the world's top clay court event, and it's fast becoming the stamping ground for the East Europeans. This is the third all- European men's final in the event in four years.

Nastase stroked his way past Tom Gorman of Seattle in a semifinal Monday— just as he did in the semis at Forest Hills and the Davis Cup final in Bucharest last year. This time, the scores were 6-3, 6-4, 6-1.

Pilic hit top form in conquering the rising young Italian, Adriano Panatta, 6-4, 6-3, 6-2. At 33, the Yugoslav lefthander is in a major tournament final for the first time.

The match was a big disappointment for the 22- year- old Panatta, who beat Nastase in last year's Paris tournament and again in the final of the British Hard Court Championships this year. The Italian had looked forward to another meeting in today's final.

"I'm not at all sure Nastase will win the title," Panatta said. "On that form, Pilic could beat Nastase or anyone else in the world."

Tour ended

SEATTLE (AP) — A gymnastics team from the People's Republic of China has finished a goodwill mission across the United States by receiving a standing ovation from more than 5,000 fans after a performance at Hec Edmundson Pavilion.

The exhibition Monday night, featuring China's top gymnasts and a group of Seattle- area performers, was capped by a musical conclusion as the Chinese sang and danced to the accompaniment of Chou Chia- sheng, the visitors' pianist.

The eight men and eight women began their tour last month in New York and visited three other U.S. cities before arriving in Seattle last Saturday.

"It was a vivid expression of deep friendship," said one of the Chinese coaches, Hsu Jenchieh, through an interpreter. "We are also looking forward for gymnasts of the United States and other sportsmen to visit China."

The Chinese will remain in Seattle until Thursday.

Howe's to play WHA

HOUSTON (AP) — Gordie Howe & Sons opened business with the Houston Aeros today on a deal that could give the World Hockey Association team a corner on the hockey talent market in the Howe clan.

The Aeros drafted the former National Hockey League great's sons Martv. 19, and Mark, 18, in the recent WHA draft and now Howe is talking about coming out of retirement to play on the same team with his sons.

"When Marty and Mark were coming up, people always used to ask me if I could hold on long enough to play with them."

Smith rallies

Smith beat Dent 4-6, 6-3, 6-4 in a second round match after losing his service in the first game of the match. He bounced back with a service break in the fourth game to tie 2-2, but had his service broken again in the ninth which cost him the first set.

Summer draft picks chosen

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball's talent scouts dipped into the free agent market today for the annual summer draft of graduating high school and college players.

The Texas Rangers were scheduled to make the first choice, and by the time the two days of drafting end, between 850 and 1,000 players were expected to be chosen.

The Rangers earned the first pick in the draft's regular phase by finishing last in the American League last season. Philadelphia, the National League's 1972 cellar team, had the No. 1 choice in the winter draft and selected infielder Alan Bannister, who is playing at Eugene of the Pacific Coast League. The Phillies own the No. 2 choice in today's regular draft.

In the secondary phase, covering players previously drafted but not signed, Oakland had the first choice. The order of selection in the secondary phase was determined by a pre-draft drawing among the 24 major league teams.

Even though it was designed primarily as a source for future talent, the summer draft has produced several instant big leaguers. There are 10 current major league players who were chosen in the last two June free agent selections.

Teams have been especially fortunate with No. 1 draft choices. In the last three years, Texas pitchers Steve Dunning and Pete Broberg and San Diego infielder Dave Roberts have all been No. 1 selections in either the regular or secondary draft rounds and moved directly into major league uniforms.

National action

The Legion battled the Lions to a 4- 3 win and Security National downed the Jaycees 9- 5 in National Little League action Monday night.

Behind the pitching of Cox, the Legion managed to hold off the scoring threats of the Lions. Breaking a 1- 1 tie, the Legion pcked up two runs to give them a slight edge. The Lions could not rally and were set back. Frost suffered the loss.

Security National Bank overcame the early lead of the Jaycees to become victors. The game was tied 5- 5 in the the third inning. Both teams seemed to be struggling to gain a hold and it was Security National which came through. Standridge slugged a grand slam to hand Security National the lead and the win. Young was the winning pitcher. Though the losing pitcher, Burgess had 17 strike- outs to his credit.

Red Sox down Royals

BOSTON (AP) — Tommy Harper of the Boston Red Sox is known in the baseball trade as a guy "who comes to play." He shrugs off injuries which would put many office workers in bed for days.

Eddie Popowski, a Boston coach, once pinchhit in an Eastern League playoff game while wearing a cast. Harper is a throwback to 59-year-old Pop's breed and would do the same if needed.

Harper, a 32-year-old outfielder, is taped nightly from the waist down by trainer Buddy LeRoux and takes his place in left field. He can barely walk around the clubhouse because of a severe groin muscle pull, but somehow turns on speed once the game starts.

The Red Sox held a comfortable 7-3 lead over the Kansas City Royals before 10,653 fans Monday night. There was no need to gamble, but Harper continued to show his hustle as the Red Sox went on to a 9-3 victory.

After walking with two out in the eighth, Harper took off for second. He had the base stolen, but Mario Guerrero grounded a single through the hole to shallow right. Harper continued on to third, then spotted rightfielder Steve Hovley holding the ball. He turned on the speed and scored easily, on a single.

"Sure, I hurt, but I have to go when I see the opportunity," Harper said. "That's the only way I know how to play. I've always had good speed and I have to use it. I don't think about sliding—until after the game. If we win, though, the paing isn't as bad."

Halton in contention

PORTHCAWL, Wales (AP) — A blond American youngster named Phil Halton has surged in o contention for the British Amateur Golf championship, and an official of the Royal and Ancient Club said: "He has one of the best swings since Jack Nicklaus."

Halton, a 22-year-old from Waco, Tex., beat England's Harry Hopkins 4 and 3 Monday in the first round of the tournament over the 6,605-yard, par 72 Royal Porthcawl links on the coast of Wales.

The Texan, who never has taken a lesson but has a natural aptitude for the game, appeared one of the strongest entries seen in the amateur classic for years.

The British Amateur is match play over 18 holes until next Saturday's 36-hole final on the rolling Porthcawl links.

Because of the 200-plus entries, the first round was carried over until today.

On Monday, 17 out of 30 U.S. starters reached the second round. Another 20 U.S. hopefuls set out in the first round today.

One American who doesn't give up made another stab at the title—and lost for the 23rd time in the first round.

Family Health Services trying to eliminate objections for funding

Too many staff members drawing too much salary, leaving too little money to use on the project's main purpose — this is but one objection to a federally - funded program which received over $300,000 for the last fiscal year to prepare to begin operations this July 1.

Last week, a review committee of the Bootheel Regional Health Council recommended that funds cease for the continuation of the Family Health Services.

As controversial as it is complex, Family Health Services has come under fire on several grounds, including the concept itself.

The proposed budget which was rejected last week asked 70 per cent for administrative costs, which is now being revised downward to 40 per cent, hopefully to persuade the council's review and comment committee to reconsider their stance.

"Granted, there's a lot of opposition to the concept of prepaid medical services, but in addition to that, there are people on the committee who are opposed to the high administrative costs, among other criticisms," says Charles Brandon, the Family Health Services marketing director, one of 22 employes who draw salaries ranging from $5,000 up to a proposed $30,000.

The New Madrid- based project's personnel, shaken but not surprised at the recommendation made last week by the committee headed by Dr. Pin Pu, Kennett physician, has begun to revamp the budget, cutting out requests for over $70,000 in salaries to seven proposed titled personnel.

As Moody Summitt, director of the Comprehensive Health Planning Council explained, "the council just didn't want to approve a budget which would add more people to run around and draw salaries."

In the new revamped budget, Brandon says Family Health Services, a private, non-profit charitable and educational corporation, will seek about $200,000 of the requested $493,776 in federal moneis for salaries.

"One of the biggest objections has been that a comparable program could be operated with three or four people, in a city the size of St. Louis, but here in the three-county area of the Bootheel, we're going to have to resort to door- to- door contact, necessitating a much larger staff in order to find the folks we want to help. And in order to get this program cranked up and going, it's going to take a lot of money, but as the program grows and more people get involved, the administrative costs will go down, percentagewise," he explained.

According to the overall plan, the first year (which ends fiscally June 30) has been devoted to strictly "getting set up," meaning that 100 per cent of the money (over $300,000) would go for administration, while the second and third year, actual services would get into operation.

In addition to the dependence of federal funds, the program's concept depends on the cooperation and acceptance by the area's medical profession, whose members must agree to participate, or there's no program.

And to date, Family Health Services has not received the approval of the medical profession as a group, only a handful of individual doctors, whose names the organization is reluctant to disclose until the doctors formally sign papers agreeing to participate.

Brandon explained. "We had hoped to wait until we got our program approved before we went out to get the doctor's signatures of approval, but now it looks like we're going to have to do that before we can get funded."

Summitt said a drive is underway now to get individual doctors to endorse the project, and Brandon says about 10 to 12 are lined up, "and we feel we're getting closer together each day."

The opposition to the subsidized, socialistic type of medical program, however, is strong among doctors, who in a recent poll in a six county area, voted 44 against the program and only four for the approach.

"We feel, however, this poll may not be accurate," Summitt explained, saying that since that time, several doctors have indicated to have voted yes would have meant they would be willing to participate in it.

Since the program was first funded, problems have been abundant, namely with the past director, Robert Hazzard, who alienated a number of people, according to Brandon. Hazzard resigned in April and was replaced by Johnny Wilson of Sikeston.

Last year, the staff included a Caruthersville physician, whose projected salary was listed at $30,000 yearly to act as a "liaison man" between the doctors and the organization. Brandon says, however, the doctor was paid only a third of the salary, $10,000, since he worked only on a "third-time" basis.

Another of the problems which plagued the organization was the hiring of a "consulting firm" to procure federal monies by preparing a well written packaged request to Washington authorities. The firm, Medserco Inc., a Delaware corportion with principal offices in Clayton, Mo. was paid $125,000 for those services rendered in obtaining the money, almost half of the total amount secured.

"Last year, when the council reviewed the application for the experimental project, it was approved reluctantly," Summitt acknowledged. At that time, the counsel made the recommendation on the condition that Family Health Services meet certain criteria, which has not been done to date, he said.

Summitt said this year the requested budget amounted to $850,870 over $700,000 requested in federal monies, figures which were considerably higher than those quoted by Brandon in the new "revamped" budget.

"Frankly, we want the program, which has not yet been given a proper test, to benefit the people in the area, not something to feather someone's pocket with high salaries," Summitt said.

The new "revamped" budget called for $625,736, with $493,776 being requested from HEW and the difference to be made up by the enrollees of the project on a "capitation payment" basis.

The new appraoch to health care services in the three-county area is an experimental plan, which someday, if the results were favorable, might be used on a national basis, proponents have disclosed.

What it amounts to is: Under the proposed plan, persons could enroll and make monthly payments to assure medical care for their entire family by a physician. The amount of payment would vary according to the size of the family and ages of its members, but a young family with two children under the age of 14 would pay $306 a year, assuring them care in a doctor's office and some drugs. The amount would not cover hospitalization, only visits to the doctor's office.In addition to the monthly payment, the enrollee would pay $1 per visit to their doctor andwould be required to pay 20 per cent of the costs of X-rays and laboratory tests.

Spradling predicts state reorganization approval

CAPE GIRARDEAU — State Sen. A. M. Spradling, of Cape Girardeau, said he believes the General Assembly will agree on an acceptable reorganization plan of the executive branch before it adjourns June 15.

Sen. Spradling, a ranking member of the Senate's reorganization committee and now serving as a member of the conference committee, predicted the measure that is finally agreed upon will more closely resemble the House version than the one approved by the Senate.

Denying a report in a St. Louis newspaper over the weekend which said the reorganization plan was in jeopardy, the Cape Girardeau Democrat said, "We've made more progress during the past week than at any time since the conference began and the reporter who wrote that story hasn't been to a single meeting this past week."

Spradling indicated Senate members of the conference committee are now more agreeable to accepting the House version, which is more general in nature than the Senate bill. Criticism has been leveled at the Senate version for spelling out in detail all facets of reorganization of the executive branch.

The Senate's oldest member in terms of service was not resistant in expressing his preference for the Senate version, which he said was preferable because it permitted a quicker, easier transition within the executive department.

But, he added, the political realities of reorganization may dictate approval of the House version, with some modifications which are now being worked out by members of the conference committee, made up of five members of the Senate and five from the House of Representatives.

Legislators vote themselves a $15 raise in daily expenses

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri's 197 legislators will get a $15 raise in their daily expenses if Gov. Christopher S. Bond signs a bill passed by the Senate.

After defeating an attempt to add an amendment raising the lawmakers' salaries from $8,400 to $11,500, the senators approved 18-9 Monday a bill raising their per diem expenses from $10 to $25.

Counting the $2,500 that a legislator can average in per diem expenses for a six-month session, the 10 cents a mile, and the salary of $8,400 a year, his total compensation would run to nearly $12,000 on the average.

Last week the House passed an amended Senate bill which removes the limit of 200 on the number of legislative employes and increased the lawmakers' annual pay to $12,000. The Senate refused to go along with the pay raise amendment.

In other action, the Senate defeated a bill to prohibit the use of studded snow tires from April 15 to Oct. 15.

The board administers special levee tax funds collected by the county for improvements and maintenance on nearly 12 miles of levee in Scott County.

County Collector Tom Marshall's report on tax collections from Feb. 28 to the present date was examined and approved by the court.

Man held in horse theft

Ricky Washburn, 20, of 823 Ruth, was being held in city jail this morning for investigation of the theft of a horse sometime Monday night from the Robert Green stables on Ables Road.

Police say they are seeking a second man in connection with the theft.

The horse belongs to Albert Moore, 300 William.

Police say Washburn claims the horse was stolen by the second man and that he just went along for the ride. The ride came to an end when the horse became entangled in a fence at 215 Good Drive. Police said a witness said Washburn was riding the horse when it became caught in the fence.

The horse reportedly received some minor cuts from the incident.

Lyda Fritsche nominated for national recognition

CHAFFEE— Mrs. Lyda DeBerry Fritsche, an executive secretary in the Normandy School District and a former Chaffee resident, has been nominated for national recognition by the Missouri Association of Educational Secretaries.

Mrs. Fritsche, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. L.M. DeBerry, is an honor graduate of Chaffee High School and Southeast Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau.

The state secretarial group first endorsed Mrs. Fritsche for "national educational secretary of the year," and her nomination has also been endorsed by Gov. Christopher S. Bond, James A. Finch Jr., chief justice of the Missouri Supreme Court, and Arthur L. Mallory, state commissioner of education.

Mrs. Fritsche has served as executive secretary to four successive heads of the Normandy School District during the 32 years, and has been secretary to Normandy Board of Education the same number of years.

Fascination with the district's early struggles overcame an interest in studying law, Mrs. Fritsche said, noting that in 1941 the district operated on a budget of $707,000, and now has an operational budget $9,500,000.

She has encouraged secretaries to "professionalize themselves," and says that the most rewarding part of her job has been to "see progress in what we've been able to do with students."

Winner of the national title is expected to be announced later this month.

High winds wreck homes

ST. PETERS, Mo. (AP)— Tornadoes struck near several communities in eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois late Monday, but it was high winds and not tornadoes, which caused the most severe damage.

About $200,000 in damages was caused, mostly to homes which lost their roofs, the St. Louis office of the National Weather Service reported. No serious injuries resulted, although some persons were cut by flying glass, police said.

George Brancato, meteorologist in charge of the weather service, said following a survey of the damage that it was a wind storm and not a tornado that hit the Sunny Meadows subdivision in the city. A twister had been reported near the community a short time before the wind storm hit.

There were reports of tornado sightings Monday night from several communities in St. Charles, Jefferson and St. Louis counties, and in communities in the Illinois portion of the area.

Several minor traffic accidents occurred in St. Louis when motorists were forced to the side of the road during a heavy downpour.

A spokesman for Union Electric Co., said about 7,000 customers in a widely scattered area were without electric power during the height of the storm.

Two broadcasting towers were struck by lightning, forcing radio station KMOX in St. Louis off the air for about 45 minutes.

Mrs. Douglas received 220 votes and Tucker 136. Leondas Allen, who received 77 votes, was eliminated from the race.

The position on the council will expire April 7, 1974. The vacancy was left by the death of Councilman W.E. Moss.

Draining bean field

Rain and water are again plaguing Sikeston area farmers, but fortunately to a more manageable degree. Monday night's hard thundershowers that brought .29 inch of rain in a short period of time sent Brewster Copeland into the soybean fields on the Jewel Blaylack farm to dig drainage ditches for the standing rainwater to run off the rows. The three- week- old beans are about three to four inches high on the Blaylack farm which is located along Highway 61 near McMullin. (Daily Standard photo by Tim Ludwig)

Sikeston looking at urban renewal

The City Council Monday night authorized businessman Phil Barkett to begin working toward establishment of an urban renewal program in the city.

Voters rejected an urban renewal program Dec. 10, 1969.

Barkett said he felt voters made a mistake in turning the program down. "It's time to get rid of the substandard housing in Sikeston," he said.

City Attorney Manuel Drumm said the program is an excellent way for the city to obtain federal money to remove blighted areas and rebuild them.

Drumm said large-scale urban renewal programs have not been successful, but small tightly controled programs have been. Charleston was cited as an example of what a good urban renewal program can do.

Under the urban renewal program, the homes in blighted areas would be purchased and removed. The residents would be moved to a new location temporarily while new homes were being built for them under the program.

Barkett said he thinks everyone is entitled to a decent place to live.

"We send billions of dollars overseas to help clean up other countries," he said. "It's time we helped ourselves."

Money for urban renewal programs is expected to become available again in the fall.

Property owners in the Hunter Acres West Addition were present at the council meeting to express their opposition to rezoning 13 lots in the subdivision from single family to multiple family dwellings.

The developers are seeking to build duplexes in the area. Property owners are upset because no price restrictions are planned for the duplexes. Minimum prices have been set for homes built in the area.

The property owners say they have large sums invested in their property and they don't want duplexes that will bring down the value of their land. Fifty-eight property owners within a two-block area of the lots where rezoning is sought signed statement against the rezoning.

The lots being considered for rezoning are south of Salcedo Road between West Street and the Frisco railroad tracks.

The council ordered the proposal tabled until both groups can meet with the planning and zoning board to work out differences.

The city and the Sikeston R-6 School District signed a contract giving the school system a five- year lease on the Airport School facilities. The schools currently use the facilities but, because of the need for long-range planning, the board of education wanted to be sure it could keep the buildings. The school system received an option to renew the lease for five years.

The Rev. R. C. Martin, pastor of Smith Street Church of God, offered the city an option on a sanitary landfill site in the Stoddard County hills west of Sikeston. He told the council the site is closer to Sikeston than the Morley site.

Council members told the Rev. Mr. Martin to talk to the individual garbage collectors.

The council again became embroiled in a discussion over garbage collection.

Attorney Tony Heckemeyer, representing some garbage collectors, said the state will not accept the city's plan to allow individual collectors to pick up trash. He said the state wants the city to take the responsibility for picking up trash.

Drumm said the city will go with the individual collector plan until told to do otherwise.

Heckemeyer said collectors are facing problems trying to comply with the law. He said it would take $150,000 worth of equipment to service Sikeston and that none of the collectors has the financial power to pick up the whole city on short notice if it becomes necessary.

He said the collectors don't know whether to buy more equipment or not because nobody knows where we are going."

A liquor by the drink ordinance, which would declare the city's controls and regulations over establishments which would serve liquor by the drink if the proposal passes in the June 26 special election, was tabled until a future meeting, which will be held before the election.

In other action,, the council approved the condemnation of buildings at 209, 222 and 107 Alabama St.

The council approved the resurfacing of East Gladys Street from Selma to the dead end and the resurfacing of Westgate from Malone to Compress Road. The sole bidder for both jobs was McMullin Construction Co.

The council also approved the paving of Garwood Avenue from Edwards to the dead end. All three jobs will be paid for through tax bills.

The council decided it did not wish to change the residency requirement for city employes. The employes are required to live in the city, but two had asked permission to live outside town.

The council also turned down a chance to buy a fire truck on a monthly payment basis, deciding it would rather pay for the truck through a bond issue.

Special election set for July 3

NEW MADRID—The city council Monday night scheduled a special election for July 3 when voters will be asked to approve a proposal for the leasing of docking and unloading facilities in St. Jude Industrial Park for a second 600 megawatt steam generating station.

The lease would provide for joint usage of existing facilities by the city and Federated Electric Cooperative, which will build a new station. The lease requires approval of the voters because the facilities are owned by the city.

The council heard a report from Buddy Waters of Waters and Associates Engineering Firm of Sikeston on proposed plans for drainage and storm sewers on Kingshighway, Riley Street and Dawson Road and for emergency pumping stations for use in time of flooding. Also discussed was extension of sewer lines to Billy Goat Hill residents in the southeast section of town. Preliminary estimates of the total cost is over $264,000.

The council also approved temporary permit for parking of a mobile home on a lot owned by Geneva York Stewart during the illness of her mother.

City administrator Don Lloyd was authorized to request the Army Corps of Engineers to reassume maintenance of the levee protecting the east side of town, which is in need of repair, due to slides and washed out areas.

A letter was read from Jessie H. Wilkins, commending police officer Russell Cobb for his promptness in arriving at the scene of an accident two minutes after being telephoned by Wilkins.

Appointment of Ronnie Adams as police officer was approved, and new lights were authorized for the tennis courts on Mill street.

Power plant construction payments totaling $63,385.95 for the city's 66 megawatt steam generating station in St. Jude Industrial Park were approved.

A request by William Baird on behalf of the service clubs of the city for permission for a fireworks display at the end of Main Street on July 4 was approved.

Inquest called in Zook death

EAST PRAIRIE— An inquest into the death of Dewey Wayne Zook, 23, who died Saturday of a gunshot wound, has been scheduled for 4 p.m. Thursday in the Magistrate Courtroom, according to Mississippi County Coroner Elgin McMikle.

Zook was struck once in the forehead with a .22-caliber rifle bullet fired Thursday by Dennis Johnston, 26.

No charges were filed against Johnston by Prosecuting Attorney W. Clifton Banta Jr., who ruled Johnston fired in self-

Assault charges are filed

CHARLESTON— Charges of assault with intent to kill were filed Monday afternoon against Lucille Wilson, 48, of Route Two in connection with an assault Saturday on her common law husband, Andrew Phillips, according to Deputy Sheriff Mike Baughman.

Phillips, who was struck five times on the head and once on the left leg with a single- bladed ax, reportedly remains in critical condition in Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston.

Mrs. Wilson is in custody and will be arraigned Thursday before Magistrate T.J. Brown Jr.

Dexter council establishes four new sewer districts

DEXTER — Terry Howes of C. R. Trotter and Associates Engineering Firm of Dexter met with the city council Monday night to discuss plans for a proposedd sewer district.

The council passed ordinances establishing four new sewer districts: District No. 1, Sycamore Flats subdivision; District No. 2, Jibbins and Westview Acres; District No. 3, Dexter Creek Park addition and south to the railroad and District No. 4, the north half of the Norman survey and part of the Rainey addition west of One Mile Road.

Plans and estimated costs will be ready in three to four weeks.

City Attorney Paul McGhee reported on a meeting held to discuss how the city plans to spend its revenue sharing money for the period from Jan 1, 1973 to June 30, 1973. Mayor Willis Conner, Councilman Jack Smarr and McGhee attended the meeting. It was decided to spend $20,000 for the repaving of One Mile Road, $9,000 for the public library $13,000 for the park system and $11,537 to be allocated for public safety, such as police cars and firetrucks for a total of $53,537.

The council agreed to have Mayor Conner discuss with C. R. Trotter and Associates the estimated cost to construct two streets for entrance and exit to the city's industrial park. The Chamber of Commerce had suggested to Mayor Conner two streets extending from one Mile Road to Fram Road and from Arvin Road to Two Mile Road.

The council voted to send city policemen Kenny Whittington to the crime laboratory in Cape Girardeau from June 18 to June 20 for a short course in drug work and drug analysis at a cost to the city of $20 plus his expenses.

City Attorney McGhee reported on a meeting with the Public Service Commission in Jefferson City in which the commission ruled that $17,000 would be paid to install a railroad crossing on South Locust St. with 90 per cent to be paid by the railroad boxcar fund

2 cyclists hurt

A four- year- old bycyclist and an 18- year- old motorcyclist were injured in separate accidents Monday when their cycles struck automobiles.

Laura Sherman, 4, of 937 Sikes Ave., the daughter of Sikeston High School Principal Roger Sherman, received a cut on the back of the head when she struck a passing car in the 900 block of Sikes.

Police said a car driven by Margaret Baker, 403 Pam, was passing the child in the northbound lane of Sikes when the girl swung her bicycle in a circle and struck the side of the car.

No arrest was made, according to police.

Perry Wayne Jolliff, 1604 E. Kathleen, received a cut on the right knee when his motorcycle ran into the side of a car which had turned in front of him about 8:45 p.m.

Police said Jolliff was westbound on East Malone Avenue when a car driven by Dora Cooper Vogel, 309 Circle Drive, made a left turn from the eastbound lane of Malone onto Mitchell Avenue. Joliff was unable to avoid hitting the car.

The woman was arrested for careless and imprudent driving.

LOOK, MA, DENTILLIUM FILLINGS

Forty million dollars worth of gold in the form of dental alloys went into the mouths of Americans last year. This represented about 4 per cent of the approximately one billion dollars worth of gold mined annually throughout the world.

Latest available statistics show that U.S. dentists used the yellow metal to complete an estimated 5.5 million gold inlays, 11.5 million single crowns and more than four million fixed bridges.

Despite the heavy demand for gold, a total of only 80,000 tons of it has been mined during recorded history — less than a single morning's output for the steel industry.

Gold has always been a scarce metal. Today, with widely fluctuating prices, the problem is particularly acute. Officially pegged at $42.22 an ounce, gold floats on the free market at between $75 and $85 an ounce.

The scarcity of gold has put a strain on all its users and led the dental profession, for one, to look for other metals. One gold alloy substitute that has been developed out of research conducted at the New York University School of Dentistry is a chrome alloy called Dentillium. Said to be equal or superior to gold for dental uses, it is presently being marketed by some 40 dental laboratories across the country.

Nonprecious alloys such as Dentillium will replace gold for crowns and fixed bridges in the next five to seven years, predicts H. L. Myers, president of Codesco, Inc., largest independent dental supply and laboratory company in the United States.

But at the rate Americans acquire dental ailments, there'll continue to be "gold" in them thar cavities for generations of dentists to come.

FOR KICKS, WATCH YOUR LANGUAGE

It's interesting how language changes, almost it seems from day to day, or at least between one edition of a dictionary and the next.

Take the word "decimate." Strictly speaking, if an army is decimated in battle it has lost one- tenth of its men. In common usage, however, the word has long meant almost total obliteration, whether of troops or of some other aggregation of living things, and this is one definition given in the Second Edition of Webster's international, published in 1934.

But even recognizing that no living language can remain static, it still comes as a bit of a jolt to see the word now being used to describe destruction in general.

For example, a recent article about the virtues of large cars versus small cars stated that the latter "would be decimated" in a crash.

Surprisingly, Webster's Third, published in 1966, has already given its blessing to this usage, citing as a sample sentence the act that inflation has "decimated" buying power.

To language purists, the whole thing is — well, decimating.

The Gardener's Ego

It started with a compliment from neighbors. They praised the inflation gardener and marveled at his ability to grow eggplants and broccoli. No one who inspected the backyard patch credited the plants themselves, the earth which sustained them or, most important of all, the weather.

There are enough such conversations during the growing season to supply most itinerant gardeners with a sense of invincibility. The unacknowledged fact, however, is that a good reputation for a green thumb is almost always built on the maligned reputation of the weather. When the cucumbers are stunted, the backyard analysts blame the weather but when the yield is prizeworthy it is usually he accomplishment of the grower.

The ritual is universal. When crops are poor in India, the weather is blamed first but when crops are good, the weather is usually credited last. Such a self-serving attitude has slandered the weather throughout history. Our own language is full negative connotations related to the word. A weather-headed person is foolish and a weather hen is an inconstant woman. We're not supposed to trust a weathery leader and are expected to sympathize with someone under the weather.

The list goes on and on (weather-wrung,-scarred, -eaten ... — but we hope this is sufficient to restore a pinch of respect for all the good things that are due to weather. Above all, it is important to beware the ego of the successful grower of a few strings of Kentucky Wonders out there in inflation gardenland.

Would you believe ... "an overpowering federal government has alienated large numbers of Americans and it could fall of its own weight it it is not decentralized." This warning was made not by a conservative Republican, but by Rep. Edith Green, a respected liberal Democrat whose views on education matters carry considerable weight with her colleagues in the House. A perceptive and articulate former school teacher from Portland, Ore., she spent her first 18 years in Congress on the House Education and Labor Committee and more recently moved to the House Appropriations Committee where she believes her influence over the federal education dollar will be even greater.

Mrs. Green believes that the Administration's educational revenue sharing proposal is a major improvement over the current categorical aid programs and will reduce federal involvement in education matters. But she is critical of several inconsistencies in Administration policy.

While the Administration is opposed to massive school busing, for instance, she points out that the Health, Education and Welfare Dept. has just requested an additional $23 million during the next two years to bus pupils not only within school districts, but also across city, county and state lines. Moreover, this money can be used to promote another favorite tool of those who seem to favor intergration over education: educational parks.

Also flying in the face of the President's interest in decentralizing the federal bureaucracy, she stresses, is the establishment of a computer system at the U.S. Office of Education that will help the agency set national standards for federal scholarship aid.

"The Administration is establishing national standards for student aid," states Mrs. Green, "and taking away from college student aid officers their making decisions on how much students will get.

"No allowance is to be made for different costs of living throughout the United States. Information on student and family finances will be put through the computer. One contractor told me it will take five million pounds of paper to distribute the final information to students and colleges."

Another reason Mrs. Green has grown wary of the growth of the federal bureaucracy is based on her probing of the U.S. Office of Education's contracts and grants division. She has found that only 10 per cent of the contract money is awarded through competitive bidding, while much of the rest is handed out to cronies and such nonsensical projects as a $24,540 grant to the Maharishi Mahesh Yogi to train teachers in the Science of Creative Intelligence and Transcendental Meditation.

She has also found kick-backs, conflicts of interest and the curious habit of HEW personnel working on a contract or grant application, approving it and shortly thereafter leaving the government to work for the recipient's company at a fat salary.

Not only is she critical of the education bureaucracy, but Mrs. Green is less than laudatory about actions taken by the Education and Labor Committee. She believes this House unit has been instrumental in centralizing power in Washington. She says:

"It takes tremendous amount of arrogance to sit on the committee and presume to know all the problems of education; to think that it can select the priorities and that the Office of Education can issue uniform guidelines and regulations, whether or not they fit local conditions.

"This leads to the 'let Washington do it' attitude at the local level and to apathy, ineptness and outright corruption. Some local officials and people don't realize the ineptness and outright medicocrity and corruption at the federal level.

"The government will fall of its own weight if it is not decentralized. Alienation and the feeling that they can't do anything about the government has spread across a wide spectrum of the American people."

HISTORY OF DRUGS II

Opium and marijuana provided two acceptable alternatives to alcohol for Moslems. Even today most Moslem countries accept marijuana and outlaw alcohol.

For centuries opium had been known and valued as a killer of pain and a source of delight. By 3000 B.C. it was found in Sumer; and around 2000 B. C. in the Aegean area. Cyprus was shipping opium to Egypt around 1500 B. C.

The pharmacopoeia of the legendary Chinese Emperor Shen Nung, said to date from 2737 B. C., notes medical uses of opium, marijuana, and tea. Marijuana was prescribed for gout, rheumatism, and malaria, beri- beri, constipation, female weakness, and absent - mindedness.

In the 5th century B. C., the Greek historian Herodotus recorded events and customs associated with drugs.

Reports of the use of betel — a mild stimulant found throughout Southeast Asia — date back to centuries before Christ. It continues to be common there, as chewing gum is in America. The user chews a quid made of a betel leaf wrapped around a cracked nut of the areca palm, slaked lime and assorted flavorings.

Kola nuts, the source of the stimulent (caffeine) used in cola drinks, have been chewed throughout West Africa for centuries. The first written records of use date back to the 13th century.

Ancient peoples in both the Old and New Worlds may have used mind- altering mushrooms. The Indian text Rig Veda (1500 B.C.) contains more than 1,000 hymns to Soma, an unidenfied plant worshipped as a god and forming the center of an elaborate cult. Recent findings indicate that Soma may be the hallucinogenic mushroom Ananita muscaria.

Plus For Eagleton

The Senate's vote on Thursday was a landmark in the agonizing involvement of the United States in the affairs of Indochina. The tally was 63 to 19 in favor of eliminating all funds for the American bombing of Cambodia and Laos, and it followed approval of a weaker but similar provision in the House May 10. If the stricture can be sustained in conference, and if President Nixon signs the ensuing legislation, American military activity would have to cease in the two countries during the fiscal year ending June 30 (after which additional votes might become necessary). Sentiment in Congress appears strong enough to override a possible presidential veto.

Credit on this issue is due Senator Eagleton of Missouri, who sponsored the funds cut-off provision as an amendment to a 3.7 billion dollar supplemental appropriations bill. Against the background of continuing illegal and immoral American bombing in Cambodia Mr. Eagleton told the Senate: "The Administration is insulting our intelligence. Its legal position is a sham and, in my opinion, represents an effort to circumvent the legislative power of Congress." Two thirds of the Senate rejected the worn-out argument of Administration apologists that enactment of the prohibition would hamper U.S. peace efforst.

Mr. Eagleton and his colleagues realized that the only way to stop the bombing and get out was to cut off funds. It was a great day, long awaited.

POWs AND AIR STRIKES

Returned U.S. prisoners of war stood and cheered recently during a party at the White House when mention was made of the B- 52 air strikes against Hanoi last December. One former POW said he knew the minute the heavy bombs started falling on the communist capital of North Vietnam that he and his comrades would be freed soon and would be returning home. It was a striking tribute to the United States and its power. That power had gone unused far too long. When the decision was made to go into Indochina and fight communist forces there we should have used more force and brought our enemy to its knees in the early stages. Political considerations by various administrations stopped us short of winning.

Meanwhile, our men were fighting and dying and many were being captured and tortured by the communist foe. There seemed no hope of getting them out except by force and once the decision was made to punish the enemy the bombers did ther jobs. Hanoi was ready to talk and return the prisoners. All citizens who saw the touching scenes as the freed prisoners returned shall never forget them.

The United States must never use its muscle in aggression strikes. Our retaliation should be swift and sure, however, when our people and the security of our nation are at stake. The world applauds a firm stand in the cause of right. That is what happened when North Vietnam felt the weight of our bombs. Above all, the change in policy got our men home safely.

It will take us, as a nation, a long time to digest the lessons of the war in Indochina. The digestion will not be easy. If we are to survive in the future, we must take those lessons to heart and strengthen our foreign policy so that there will be no more settlements of the Korea and Indochina types. HLH

NEW YORK— In the jargon of Broadway, the hottest ticket in town is an invitation to Nelson Rockefeller's June 12 reception to labor leaders at a local inn--- with a card enclosed announcing that Secretary of Labor Peter Brennan will be there.

There are several matters of import and impact here. It appears to insiders that Gov. Rockefeller and Pete Brennan are becoming each other's fond surrogates. Both appear to need each other. Both appear to have their eye on the White House--- the governor as President and the Labor Secretary as his strong right hand.

It is significant that Rocky is featuring Pete at this moment when the governor's old friend, labor's chief of chiefs, George Meany, continues inexorably to go for Brennan's political jugular.

There was, for example, that moment the morning of May 23 in Washington's Sheraton Park Hotel when a Meany, having the time of his long life, told a loudly laughing audience of unionized glass bottle blowers that Brennan was a "dummy." And reaching back into his (Meany's) encyclopedic knowledge of vaudeville lore, the AFL— CIO president called the member of Mr. Nixon's cabinet an Edgar Bergan and Paul Winchell rag-doll mouthpiece for the President and the Office of Management and Budget in Particular and "the other side" in general.

It was a razor ripping talk. Brennan was referred to as "a fellow who used to carry a union card." Which meant that Meany was reading out of the movement this former president of New York's powerful Building and Construction Trades--- and still a member of the painters union.

But New York labor--- and some finances, history has it--- are the bases of Gov. Rockefeller's strength here and across the land. The governor is determined not to permit Brennan to be tarred. First, out of personal affection ("I love Pete," Rockefeller says regularly), and second, Brennan and his hard- hat constituency have withstood Meany's triphammer assaults.

Thus, Brennan is honored at a Black Trade Unionists dinner dance of the 1.2 million member city Central Labor Council and at the June 12 reception as well as the June 14 State Republican dinners spilling over two hotels.

Nor is the President retreating under Meany's buzzsaw derision. Just the other day one White House image- making specialist conferred with Brennan on how to gild himself and the Labor Department. Handsome Peter called in the women's lib and equal rights leaders and charmed them. And he is a charmer, what with the tenor voice, the prematurely snow-white hair and a disarming Irish winsomeness unmatched in the capital.

So the ticket to the June 12 indoor picnic is "hot." And scarce. Of course, everybody will crash. Everybody knows that Rocky is going for broke--- and that will take some doing--- not merely in his race for a fith gubernatorial term in '74 but for the presidency in '76. And lots of the labor men want to be at the head of the still imaginary White House reception line that far off inauguration day in January 1977. This is their thinking.

They have heard that, early as it is, Gov. Rockefeller is building his national network and gathering his surrogates. Not the least of these will be Peter Brennan--- who has wowed them here, in Jacksonville, in Milwaukee and the West Coast though he's less an orator than anyone since A. Lincoln read something off an envelope at Gettysburg.

Slowly the national labor machine is being built. More and more, Rockefeller's people are being encouraged to go beyond state borders.

There is a feeling that the governor might recoup the support of such men as Sen. Barry Goldwater who was his close friend and supporter away back in 1963. They met then and talked long and often before they broke over an issue which was deeper than that which surfaced. Rockefeller has moved into the center and a little to its right, too. And there is Ted Agnew who, as Maryland's governor, once was Rockefeller's surrogate for labor. Some inept handling lost him Agnew. More improbable occurrences have developed recently than a Rockefeller-Agnew alliance.

And almost completely overlooked is an exchange of letters between Messrs. Nixon and Rockefeller. On Feb. 22, the President wrote the governor a "Dear Nelson" letter, referring to the New York State Study on the Role of the Modern State in a Changing World, "I would invite you to broaden your inquiry into a National Commission which would look to the future of America in its Third Century. I would appreicate your organizing such a National Commission which would be bipartisan and broadly representative of all Americans. I would also request that you report periodically to me and to the Congress the Commission's findings and recommendations."

Mr. Nixon then named Anne Armstrong (counsel to the President) to serve as liaison. And some financing.

In reply, Rockefeller wrote that the "concept of expanding this Study on the Future of America in its Third Century is tremendously exciting." He said he would broaden the commission into a national group. And that he would report regularly to the President and the Congress on "political, economic, social and military developments." This would carry him through to the bicentennial in '76 and the 200th anniversary, in 1989, of the Constitution.

Certainly this could keep Gov. Rockefeller (if he is reelected in '74) periodically in the national headlines for years--- the right years.

Rockefeller's letter was written, please note, as recently as May 3. And signed with "warm personal regards." It could be that the governor may have a President as surrogate, too. And that's why Pete Brennan's people are talking of staying on in the administration for another seven years.

And the June 12 ticket is hot.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:

Martha: Night of the Needle

WASHINGTON — A lot has happened since Martha Mitchell complained last June 23 that a security guard had ripped her telephone out of the wall and had inoculated her indelicately in the derriere.

For close to a year, witnesses have kept silent about the incident. But in the wake of the Watergate revelations, the new spirit of confession has now loosened their tongues. We have learned, at last, the details that housewives have been hounding us for.

The implication of their inquiries has been that poor Martha knew too much and was shup up by Republican security guards. The truth is less sinister. Martha Mitchell is a delightful, if loquacious lady. She has color and sparkle and a sense of humor. But she sometimes becomes volatile when she drinks too much.

This was her condition on June 23 in Newport Beach's Newporter Hotel on the California coast. As she became more shrill, her security guard, Steve King, tried to calm her. She screamed that he was holding her prisoner and lunged for the telephone to call for help.

YANKS OUT PHONE

King was worried that, in her condition, she might reach a reporter and say something that would embarrass her later. So he yanked the telephone cord out of the wall while she was talking to UPI reporter Helen Thomas.

Martha became violent, assaulting the furnishings. Once she slashed the air was a karate swing and her hand crashed through a window pane. The broken glass cut her hand deeply, increasing her hysteria.

King summoned the hotel doctor, but Martha refused to let him look at her hurt hand. To quiet her, King pinned her down while the doctor gave her a tranquilizer shot. It had little immediate effect on the agitated Martha, who continued to rave. At one point, she wrapped a washrag around her hand to stop the bleeding but still wouldn't let the doctor treat it.

The harassed security guard, meanwhile, decided Martha Mitchell was more than he could handle. So he phoned her husband, ex-Attorney Gerneral John Mitchell, in Washington and gave hin a blow-by-blow account of the altercation.

CALL TO KALMBACH

Immediately, Mitchell placed an urgent call to President Nixon's personal attorney, Herb Kalmbach, who happens to live in Newport Beach. Mitchell asked Kalmbach, as a personal favor, to hurry to the hotel and take charge of the situation.

When Kalmbach arrived, he found Martha still at full lung power, a blood-soaked washrag around her hand, protesting that she was being held prisoner. He finally got her calmed and brought in his own doctor to examine her hand.

Martha Mitchell got her hand stitched, spent the next day with the Kalmbachs and then flew to New York for a few days of seclusion at the plush Westchester Country Club.

John Mitchell, meanwhile, discussed the incident with the President, who was understanding and agreed Mitchell should leave the campaign to straighten out his marital problems. The former attorney general may also have felt the Watergate developments closing in on him. But Watergate was not mentioned, according to knowledgeable sources, as his reason for resigning.

— WASHINGTON WHIRL —

INDIAN MEDICINE: Two militant Indian leaders appeared the other day at the Interior Department, the citadel of the white bureaucracy they have been warring against. They had been invited by Interior Secretary Rogers Morton to present their views. The conscientious Morton, who is slowly recovering from cancer, impressed the Indians with his sincerity. At the end of the interview, LaNada Boyer, a Bannock-Shoshone, quietly pulled from her purse twigs of cedar. Burning cedar is the age-old Indian ritual for good health. As Morton nodded appreciatively, the Indian woman fanned the fragrant smoke toward him, saying softly, "This is for your health."

SHORT MEMORIES: The nation's militant conservationists sometimes have memories as short as their tempers. One of the Senate's most tireless fighters for the environment has been Frank Moss, D-Utah, who has sponsored every major air and water pollution bill that has passed in the last 15 years. He has also cosponsored the Wilderness Act, the Wild Rivers Act and the Outdoor Recreation Act. Now, however, Moss has backed measures to allow a water back-up from Lake Powell that will increase the water beneath Rainbow Bridge National Monument. Although it is dubious that the water would structurally damage the bridge, Moss is being nastily attacked by some of his fair-weather friends in the environmental movement.

EAVESDROPPING EXEMPTION: The telephone of Defense Department employes are subject to eavesdropping at any time. The Civilian and military employes can only grit their teeth and swear: They must accept the snooping as a condition of employment. But recently, Brig. Gen. F.H. Cutrona, the Pentagon information director, announced in a memo that 42 of the thousands of Pentagon phones would be "exempt" from surveillance. These are the phones of reporters in the Department of Defense press room. Now that reporters have been assured their phones are tap-free, they expect a flood of officers asking to use them to make personal calls.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Consumer interests slashed with banking interests and the House battled the Senate Monday in the Missouri Legislature.

However, after an hour of heated debate, floor fights over amendments and a disputed voice vote, it was unclear who won. Final action on a banking bill that sparked the debate was delayed.

"Although we must be aware of the pleas of the bankers, we must also be aware of the good of the people," said majority floor leader Kenneth Rothman, D-Clayton.

The hassle came over an amendment to a Senate bill, sponsored by Sen. Albert M. Spradling, D-Cape Girardeau, to allow banks to provide loan services at their drive-in facilities.

Rothman widened the issue when he attempted to add an amendment to revise the state's controversial "holder-in-due-course" laws.

The present holder-in-duecourse laws allow a bank or credit company to buy contracts from sales firms without taking responsibility for defects in the products or services sold by the companies.

Although one representative called the amendment a "bludgeon tactic" to force the Senate to accept the holder-in-due-course revisions Rothman said his measure was a "real consumer's bill."

Rothman said even when some companies have gone bankrupt, the banks can still collect from consumers under present laws.

A bill similar to Rothman's amendment was passed by the House 145-9 in February. It was sent tothe Senate, and referred to the banking and financial institutions committee.

Spradling, who is a banker himself and who has sponsored several banking bills this session, is chairman

Additional interchange called for

DYERSBURG, Tenn. — A justification study calling for an additional interchange on Interstate 155 that will connect Tennessee with Missouri via a new Mississippi River bridge in Dyer County, has been completed by design engineers of the Tennessee Department of Transportation.

The proposed interchange is located at the main line Mississippi River levee in West Dyer County and would provide a direct route north to Lake County and Reelfoot Lake from the Missouri bootheel.

Commissioner of Transportation Robert Smith said, "We have hopes that our request for this interchange will be accepted this time. Our study, which includes a design and full feasibility study will be submitted immediately to the divisional office here in Nashville for approval. From there it will go to the regional office in Atlanta, and finally to the Federal Highway Administration in Washington."

He said, "We should have an answer on the interchange in about three months."

Lake, Dyer and Obion countians in Tennessee and residents of the Missouri Bootheel, began renewed efforts to seek the interchange last January Percy Smith of Tiptonville, T. C. Stutts, Dyer County court chairman, and Horace Dunagan of Caruthersville spearheaded the movement.

Residents of the area had been under the impression that the super highhway would have two interchanges between the river and Dyersburg. When construction began, they realized that final plans called for only one at Lenox.

Missouri residents charged the bridge would become a one way bridge into Tennessee without another interchange.

They pointed out that the gravel road atop the levee is used extensively by Tennesseans who live in western areas of Dyer and Lake counties and by Tennesseans and Missourians traveling back and forth to the Bootheel.

All groups involved declared the interchange was necessary to encourage tourist traffic to Reelfoot Lake in Lake County and business traffic to Missouri. They said that without the interchange, 15 miles would be added to a trip to Lake County from Caruthersville.

Dyer County court chairman T. C. Stutts said Monday, "The recent Mississippi River flood that marooned many persons near the levee, pointed to the necessity of an interchange at the levee. If there had been a good floodproof road for our people, they could have gotten out of the flood water safely."

The original request for the interchange made by Tennessee was turned down in 1967.

Commissioner Smith, who ordered the new justification study made, said his office and Gov. Winfield Dunn were interested in the interchange prior to local residents asking for the request to be renewed.

"Lake County depends a great deal on tourist business for its total economy and we think it needs the interchange," he said. "If the interchange is granted, its construction will not interfere with the work going on at present."

Farris-Backfisch

BENTON — St. Denis Catholic Church was the setting the afternoon of May 5 when Miss Mary Louise Backfisch became the bride of Thomas Howerd Farris Jr. in a double-ring ceremony performed by the Rev. Raymond Kunkel.

The church was decorated with pink and white carnations. Miss Denise Schlosser was organist, and Miss Debbie Urhahn sang.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Backfisch of Benton and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Howerd Farris of Olive Branch, Ill.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, appeared in a high-waisted gown of white satin with flowered lace bodice and chapel-length train. She carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations.

The bride's sister, Miss Joyce Backfisch, was maid of honor, and Mrs. Rodney Miller, also a sister of the bride, was matron of honor.

Bernon Backfisch, brother of the bride, was best man, and Miller was groomsman. Ushering guests were Paul Backfisch and Sylvester Backfisch, brothers of the bride.

A reception followed the ceremony at the St. Denis school hall, and a dance was held later that day at the American Legion Hall. At the reception, guests were served by the Misses Anna, Helen, Laura, Nancy and Laverne Glastetter, Miss Kathleen Heisserer and Miss Ruth Ann Backfisch. Miss Backfisch also attended the guest book.

Mr. and Mrs. Farris are employed by Florsheim Shoe Co. at Cape Girardeau. They live at Olive Brance, Ill.

Pullens have family reunion

BELL CITY — The first annual reunion of the family of the late Josephus and Flora Pullen was held May 27 at the community building of the Church of God in Christ seven miles southeast of Bell City.

The blessing was given by the Rev. J.C. Pullen Jr. for the 4 p.m. dinner.

The oldest persons present were Mrs. Lizzie Ammons and Mrs. Mary Jordon, both close friends of the family.

Ann Landers

Father fed up with hearing complaints of 'bad' parents

Dear Ann Landers: Here's an open letter to all you kids who are mad at your parents because they didn't give you enough love when you were growing up. (Some of you "kids" are 30 years old.) Your psychiatrist told you (for $40 an hour) that your parents are to blame for messing you up--- that they were too busy making money or being community big shots. A hired woman fed and dressed you. You weren't rocked enough, or breast- fed. Or your parents had a bad marriage. They yelled at each other and you got bad vibes.

How do you account for all the kids who grew up on the street, never knew a decent meal, no silverware on the table, father a drunk, mother a barfly, yet they made it just fine--- without psychiatric help. Many of these so- called "neglected" kids are leaders in business, politics, education, art, music--- wherever you look.

I am so fed up hearing kids blame their parents for everything that I could throw up. I am waiting for the day when they have kids of their own. Let's see how well THEY turn out--- Your Good- For-Nothing Father

Dear Father: You didn't ask for any advice, but I have an idea you should have grabbed a few of those $40 sessions for yourself. You sound deeply disappointed in your children and worse yet, seething with anger. Obviously you've been hurt and rejected and it shows. Maybe it's not too late for you to get some self- understanding. I recommend it.

Dear Ann Landers: I would like to reply to the person who sent that Credo For Salespeople. It made every clerk in this store hopping mad. After all, we aren't ALL ignorant, unresponsive, indifferent and moronic. Granted, one out of ten salespeople just might fit that description, but I can tell you from experience that the chances for getting a pain- in-the- ankle customer are better than 50- 50.

Here is my list of salesmen's greivances. I'll bet no store manager will have this credo framed and hung, but I'll feel better for having written it.

1. Please don't try to get a clerk's attention by snapping your fingers, whistling, or pulling at his or her sleeve.

2. Please don't let your children run loose in the store, screaming like banshees, knocking over stacks of cans, breaking and soiling merchandise. If you can't discipline them, leave them at home.

3. Merchandise is sealed for YOUR protection. Please don't rip it open. Would you buy a jar with a broken seal? Well, neither would anyone else.

4. At present I work at a supermarket checkout counter. I say "thank you" to every customer. One person out of twenty responds.

I could go on indefinitely, but these are for openers. Let's hear it for the Sales Clerks of America. Every day we have to put up with screaming kids, shoplifters, non- English-speaking customers, and sourpusses like that clown who wrote to you. No hint as to where this letter came from, please, Ann. I need my job. Sign me--- Other Side Of The Counter

Dear Side: Never let it be said that I didn't give both sides of the counter a fair hearing. You've made some valid points and I thank you for writing.

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How To Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50c in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self- addressed envelope to this newspaper.

What's the Law?

The case of the — beaned dingdong

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Luckless Looey didn't fare too well at a County Fair. Ambling past a baseball pitching concession, he fell victim to a hurler who was attempting to dislodge some helpless dolls sitting on a rack 25 feet down an alleyway. Winding up like he was waving a shillelagh instead of getting ready to pitch a baseball, he reared to the rear and, as he brought his hand back to fire the baseball, he clonked hapless Looey on the noggin as the latter walked by.

"Some precaution should have been taken," complained Looey in court, "to prevent people from being knocked over instead of the dolls.."

"No precaution was necessary," retorted the concessionaire. "The only reason Looey got clobbered was because he was a dingdong. Had he kept his eyes peeled, he wouldn't have gotten beaned and there'd been no lawsuit. The fault was with him and not with me."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you hold the concessionaire liable for Dingdong Looey's beaning?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that considering the national popularity of baseball as a sports warrants the conclusion that even a 9- year- old lad is aware of the danger attendant to his remaining in proximity to persons throwing baseballs. Under the circumstances, concluded the judge, while the accident was perhaps foreseeable and certainly of a type possible, its probability of occurrence was not so great as to render the operator of the baseball concession negligent for failing to take measures to prevent its happening.

Ryan, Fabick are victors

In Monday night American Little League action, Ryan bombed Ziegenhorn 17- 4 and Fabick withheld First National Bank to take the win 7- 6.

Polley, the hard throwing right- hander for Ryan, displayed fine pitching talents in his game against Ziegenhorn. The losing pitcher was Rowe. Despite the loss, Ziegenhorn's team had the only extra base hit when Anderson hit a homerun.

The second game was one for sluggers as five doubles, one triple and three homeruns were hit. After a slow start, Fabick picked themselves up and begin swinging. Holding a 7- 0 lead, Fabick had to cope with a rally from First National during the last inning, but First National was stopped after scoring six and had to take the loss. Self was the winning and King the losing pitcher. The doubles were by Self and Harper of Fabick with Swinney King and Wrathers hitting for First National. Harper also had the only triple. Merrideth, swinging for Fabick, had their homerun and it was Frankum and Wrathers hitting one each for First National.

Hamra, Francis pitch wins

In Jr. Babe Ruth play Monday night, the Eagles came from behind to take Davis & Bird 7-6 and Home Materials blasted Nowell 14-1.

The Eagles picked up the lead during the second inning of play and held on to it despite the threats of Davis & Bird. Failing to score, the Eagles fell two runs behind as D & B rallied to bring five runs across the plate during the fourth. It was a battle between the two teams, but the Eagles had the win, scoring their three runs in the sixth. Mike Hamra pitched the win and Larry Keller had the loss. Bob Leible for the Eagles and David Shell for D & B both had doubles.

Homer Materials bombed Eddie Nunnelee for eight runs in the first inning for a comfortable lead which carried them to the win. Nowell managed to squeeze out a single run, but after that all bats were quieted. Home Materials did not score again until the fourth bringing across an additional six to give them a big advantage. Don Francis showed fine pitching talent as he held Nowell to a single run and only two hits. Kevin Laseter had the only extra base hit of the game with a triple.

Wins scored

Deen pitched Budweiser to a 9-2 win over the Eagles and Ziegenhorn took a 8-6 decision over Learue McKinney Monday night in Sikeston Fast Pitch Softball League.

The Eagles found the hitting to be tough against the throwing arm of Deen. The hits were not coming and the Eagles could not score on Budweiser. Thompson had the loss for the Eagles.

The second game was a tight one, but it was Ziegenhorn to pull out the win. Hahs was the winning pitcher and Jerrell had the loss.

Foreman in bout

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — George Foreman's first pay day as heavyweight champion of the world is scheduled Sept. 1 in Tokyo when he meets littleknown Joe "King" Roman of Puerto Rico.

The undefeated 24-year-old boxer from nearby Hayward received $375,000 on Jan. 22 when he upset Joe Frazier with a second round knockout to claim the title. His next purse probably will be double that amount, his trainer and manager, Dick Sadler indicated Monday.

Sadler and Foreman will probably go to Japan next month to sign final contracts and settle the amount of the purse. Sponsors have put up $2 million, which includes money for a second title fight on the same program, but have given no breakdown of how it will be split.

The other championship bout at the 15,000-seat Budokan Hall will be between Mexico's Ricardo Arredondo, World Boxing Council junior lightweight titleholder, and Japan's Morito Kashiwaba. The heavyweight fight will be televised throughout the world via satellite beginning at 11 p.m., EDT.

Sadler said that Foreman will begin light workouts this week in an Oakland gym, "shaking loose to stay in shape."

The champ has fought only exhibitions since Jan. 22 and his weight, 218, for the Frazier fight, is up to 235.

"He'll be down to 218 for the Roman fight," Sadler promised.

Roman is ranked as the No. 10 contender by the WBC. Most of the higher ranked heavyweights, including Frazier, Ellis, Muhammad Ali, Ken Norton, Joe Bugner and Ron Lyle, already have fights scheduled this summer.

Mets injured

So would the New York Mets.

Jones and Grote are currently on the list while Milner and Mays are recent removals, although Mays has yet to see action since coming off.

It was the fifth consecutive defeat for Jon Matlack, 2-8. The Rookie of the Year in 1972 hasn't won since April 28. Nor has he escaped the injury bugaboo. He suffered a hairline skull fracture when hit by a line drive last month and missed a couple of starts.

Nastase is tennis wizard

PARIS (AP) — They've called Ilie Nastase a tennis wizard, a clown, a prima donna and just plain "Nasty." But today, he could prove himself to be the world's No. 1 clay court player.

Nastase, a 26- year- old Romanian, faces Nikki Pilic of Yugoslavia for the men's singles title of the French Open Tennis Championships.

The tournament at Roland Garros Stadium is rated the world's top clay court event, and it's fast becoming the stamping ground for the East Europeans. This is the third all- European men's final in the event in four years.

Nastase stroked his way past Tom Gorman of Seattle in a semifinal Monday— just as he did in the semis at Forest Hills and the Davis Cup final in Bucharest last year. This time, the scores were 6-3, 6-4, 6-1.

Pilic hit top form in conquering the rising young Italian, Adriano Panatta, 6-4, 6-3, 6-2. At 33, the Yugoslav lefthander is in a major tournament final for the first time.

The match was a big disappointment for the 22- year- old Panatta, who beat Nastase in last year's Paris tournament and again in the final of the British Hard Court Championships this year. The Italian had looked forward to another meeting in today's final.

"I'm not at all sure Nastase will win the title," Panatta said. "On that form, Pilic could beat Nastase or anyone else in the world."

Tour ended

SEATTLE (AP) — A gymnastics team from the People's Republic of China has finished a goodwill mission across the United States by receiving a standing ovation from more than 5,000 fans after a performance at Hec Edmundson Pavilion.

The exhibition Monday night, featuring China's top gymnasts and a group of Seattle- area performers, was capped by a musical conclusion as the Chinese sang and danced to the accompaniment of Chou Chia- sheng, the visitors' pianist.

The eight men and eight women began their tour last month in New York and visited three other U.S. cities before arriving in Seattle last Saturday.

"It was a vivid expression of deep friendship," said one of the Chinese coaches, Hsu Jenchieh, through an interpreter. "We are also looking forward for gymnasts of the United States and other sportsmen to visit China."

The Chinese will remain in Seattle until Thursday.

Howe's to play WHA

HOUSTON (AP) — Gordie Howe & Sons opened business with the Houston Aeros today on a deal that could give the World Hockey Association team a corner on the hockey talent market in the Howe clan.

The Aeros drafted the former National Hockey League great's sons Martv. 19, and Mark, 18, in the recent WHA draft and now Howe is talking about coming out of retirement to play on the same team with his sons.

"When Marty and Mark were coming up, people always used to ask me if I could hold on long enough to play with them."

Summer draft picks chosen

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball's talent scouts dipped into the free agent market today for the annual summer draft of graduating high school and college players.

The Texas Rangers were scheduled to make the first choice, and by the time the two days of drafting end, between 850 and 1,000 players were expected to be chosen.

The Rangers earned the first pick in the draft's regular phase by finishing last in the American League last season. Philadelphia, the National League's 1972 cellar team, had the No. 1 choice in the winter draft and selected infielder Alan Bannister, who is playing at Eugene of the Pacific Coast League. The Phillies own the No. 2 choice in today's regular draft.

In the secondary phase, covering players previously drafted but not signed, Oakland had the first choice. The order of selection in the secondary phase was determined by a pre-draft drawing among the 24 major league teams.

Even though it was designed primarily as a source for future talent, the summer draft has produced several instant big leaguers. There are 10 current major league players who were chosen in the last two June free agent selections.

Teams have been especially fortunate with No. 1 draft choices. In the last three years, Texas pitchers Steve Dunning and Pete Broberg and San Diego infielder Dave Roberts have all been No. 1 selections in either the regular or secondary draft rounds and moved directly into major league uniforms.

National action

The Legion battled the Lions to a 4- 3 win and Security National downed the Jaycees 9- 5 in National Little League action Monday night.

Behind the pitching of Cox, the Legion managed to hold off the scoring threats of the Lions. Breaking a 1- 1 tie, the Legion pcked up two runs to give them a slight edge. The Lions could not rally and were set back. Frost suffered the loss.

Security National Bank overcame the early lead of the Jaycees to become victors. The game was tied 5- 5 in the the third inning. Both teams seemed to be struggling to gain a hold and it was Security National which came through. Standridge slugged a grand slam to hand Security National the lead and the win. Young was the winning pitcher. Though the losing pitcher, Burgess had 17 strike- outs to his credit.

Red Sox down Royals

BOSTON (AP) — Tommy Harper of the Boston Red Sox is known in the baseball trade as a guy "who comes to play." He shrugs off injuries which would put many office workers in bed for days.

Eddie Popowski, a Boston coach, once pinchhit in an Eastern League playoff game while wearing a cast. Harper is a throwback to 59-year-old Pop's breed and would do the same if needed.

Harper, a 32-year-old outfielder, is taped nightly from the waist down by trainer Buddy LeRoux and takes his place in left field. He can barely walk around the clubhouse because of a severe groin muscle pull, but somehow turns on speed once the game starts.

The Red Sox held a comfortable 7-3 lead over the Kansas City Royals before 10,653 fans Monday night. There was no need to gamble, but Harper continued to show his hustle as the Red Sox went on to a 9-3 victory.

After walking with two out in the eighth, Harper took off for second. He had the base stolen, but Mario Guerrero grounded a single through the hole to shallow right. Harper continued on to third, then spotted rightfielder Steve Hovley holding the ball. He turned on the speed and scored easily, on a single.

"Sure, I hurt, but I have to go when I see the opportunity," Harper said. "That's the only way I know how to play. I've always had good speed and I have to use it. I don't think about sliding—until after the game. If we win, though, the paing isn't as bad."

Smith rallies

Smith beat Dent 4-6, 6-3, 6-4 in a second round match after losing his service in the first game of the match. He bounced back with a service break in the fourth game to tie 2-2, but had his service broken again in the ninth which cost him the first set.

Halton in contention

PORTHCAWL, Wales (AP) — A blond American youngster named Phil Halton has surged in o contention for the British Amateur Golf championship, and an official of the Royal and Ancient Club said: "He has one of the best swings since Jack Nicklaus."

Halton, a 22-year-old from Waco, Tex., beat England's Harry Hopkins 4 and 3 Monday in the first round of the tournament over the 6,605-yard, par 72 Royal Porthcawl links on the coast of Wales.

The Texan, who never has taken a lesson but has a natural aptitude for the game, appeared one of the strongest entries seen in the amateur classic for years.

The British Amateur is match play over 18 holes until next Saturday's 36-hole final on the rolling Porthcawl links.

Because of the 200-plus entries, the first round was carried over until today.

On Monday, 17 out of 30 U.S. starters reached the second round. Another 20 U.S. hopefuls set out in the first round today.

One American who doesn't give up made another stab at the title—and lost for the 23rd time in the first round.

Family Health Services trying to eliminate objections for funding

Too many staff members drawing too much salary, leaving too little money to use on the project's main purpose — this is but one objection to a federally - funded program which received over $300,000 for the last fiscal year to prepare to begin operations this July 1.

Last week, a review committee of the Bootheel Regional Health Council recommended that funds cease for the continuation of the Family Health Services.

As controversial as it is complex, Family Health Services has come under fire on several grounds, including the concept itself.

The proposed budget which was rejected last week asked 70 per cent for administrative costs, which is now being revised downward to 40 per cent, hopefully to persuade the council's review and comment committee to reconsider their stance.

"Granted, there's a lot of opposition to the concept of prepaid medical services, but in addition to that, there are people on the committee who are opposed to the high administrative costs, among other criticisms," says Charles Brandon, the Family Health Services marketing director, one of 22 employes who draw salaries ranging from $5,000 up to a proposed $30,000.

The New Madrid- based project's personnel, shaken but not surprised at the recommendation made last week by the committee headed by Dr. Pin Pu, Kennett physician, has begun to revamp the budget, cutting out requests for over $70,000 in salaries to seven proposed titled personnel.

As Moody Summitt, director of the Comprehensive Health Planning Council explained, "the council just didn't want to approve a budget which would add more people to run around and draw salaries."

In the new revamped budget, Brandon says Family Health Services, a private, non-profit charitable and educational corporation, will seek about $200,000 of the requested $493,776 in federal moneis for salaries.

"One of the biggest objections has been that a comparable program could be operated with three or four people, in a city the size of St. Louis, but here in the three-county area of the Bootheel, we're going to have to resort to door- to- door contact, necessitating a much larger staff in order to find the folks we want to help. And in order to get this program cranked up and going, it's going to take a lot of money, but as the program grows and more people get involved, the administrative costs will go down, percentagewise," he explained.

According to the overall plan, the first year (which ends fiscally June 30) has been devoted to strictly "getting set up," meaning that 100 per cent of the money (over $300,000) would go for administration, while the second and third year, actual services would get into operation.

In addition to the dependence of federal funds, the program's concept depends on the cooperation and acceptance by the area's medical profession, whose members must agree to participate, or there's no program.

And to date, Family Health Services has not received the approval of the medical profession as a group, only a handful of individual doctors, whose names the organization is reluctant to disclose until the doctors formally sign papers agreeing to participate.

Brandon explained. "We had hoped to wait until we got our program approved before we went out to get the doctor's signatures of approval, but now it looks like we're going to have to do that before we can get funded."

Summitt said a drive is underway now to get individual doctors to endorse the project, and Brandon says about 10 to 12 are lined up, "and we feel we're getting closer together each day."

The opposition to the subsidized, socialistic type of medical program, however, is strong among doctors, who in a recent poll in a six county area, voted 44 against the program and only four for the approach.

"We feel, however, this poll may not be accurate," Summitt explained, saying that since that time, several doctors have indicated to have voted yes would have meant they would be willing to participate in it.

Since the program was first funded, problems have been abundant, namely with the past director, Robert Hazzard, who alienated a number of people, according to Brandon. Hazzard resigned in April and was replaced by Johnny Wilson of Sikeston.

Last year, the staff included a Caruthersville physician, whose projected salary was listed at $30,000 yearly to act as a "liaison man" between the doctors and the organization. Brandon says, however, the doctor was paid only a third of the salary, $10,000, since he worked only on a "third-time" basis.

Another of the problems which plagued the organization was the hiring of a "consulting firm" to procure federal monies by preparing a well written packaged request to Washington authorities. The firm, Medserco Inc., a Delaware corportion with principal offices in Clayton, Mo. was paid $125,000 for those services rendered in obtaining the money, almost half of the total amount secured.

"Last year, when the council reviewed the application for the experimental project, it was approved reluctantly," Summitt acknowledged. At that time, the counsel made the recommendation on the condition that Family Health Services meet certain criteria, which has not been done to date, he said.

Summitt said this year the requested budget amounted to $850,870 over $700,000 requested in federal monies, figures which were considerably higher than those quoted by Brandon in the new "revamped" budget.

"Frankly, we want the program, which has not yet been given a proper test, to benefit the people in the area, not something to feather someone's pocket with high salaries," Summitt said.

The new "revamped" budget called for $625,736, with $493,776 being requested from HEW and the difference to be made up by the enrollees of the project on a "capitation payment" basis.

The new appraoch to health care services in the three-county area is an experimental plan, which someday, if the results were favorable, might be used on a national basis, proponents have disclosed.

What it amounts to is: Under the proposed plan, persons could enroll and make monthly payments to assure medical care for their entire family by a physician. The amount of payment would vary according to the size of the family and ages of its members, but a young family with two children under the age of 14 would pay $306 a year, assuring them care in a doctor's office and some drugs. The amount would not cover hospitalization, only visits to the doctor's office.In addition to the monthly payment, the enrollee would pay $1 per visit to their doctor andwould be required to pay 20 per cent of the costs of X-rays and laboratory tests.

2 divorces granted

BENTON— Two divorces were granted by Judge Marshall Craig Thursday in Circuit Court.

Deborah Kay Wallace received a divorce from Robert Chance Wallace. Mrs. Wallace was awarded care and custody of a minor child and the defendant was ordered to pay the sume of $15 per week for the support and maintenance of minor child.

Janet Delphine Hill was granted a divorce from Miles Hill. Mrs. Hill was granted care and custody of minor children until the evening of June 23. At that time the children will return to Hill who will retain custody of them thereafter provided Mrs. Hill has reasonable rights of visitation.

Spradling predicts state reorganization approval

CAPE GIRARDEAU — State Sen. A. M. Spradling, of Cape Girardeau, said he believes the General Assembly will agree on an acceptable reorganization plan of the executive branch before it adjourns June 15.

Sen. Spradling, a ranking member of the Senate's reorganization committee and now serving as a member of the conference committee, predicted the measure that is finally agreed upon will more closely resemble the House version than the one approved by the Senate.

Denying a report in a St. Louis newspaper over the weekend which said the reorganization plan was in jeopardy, the Cape Girardeau Democrat said, "We've made more progress during the past week than at any time since the conference began and the reporter who wrote that story hasn't been to a single meeting this past week."

Spradling indicated Senate members of the conference committee are now more agreeable to accepting the House version, which is more general in nature than the Senate bill. Criticism has been leveled at the Senate version for spelling out in detail all facets of reorganization of the executive branch.

The Senate's oldest member in terms of service was not resistant in expressing his preference for the Senate version, which he said was preferable because it permitted a quicker, easier transition within the executive department.

But, he added, the political realities of reorganization may dictate approval of the House version, with some modifications which are now being worked out by members of the conference committee, made up of five members of the Senate and five from the House of Representatives.

Eric's Discovery

Glorified real estate advertising is hardly new. When Eric the Red discovered Greenland in 982, he gave the Arctic island its misleading name in a successful bid to attract Viking colonists.

The latter has two walls of appliance and work space. Double sinks and broom closet are boons to the houewife. Four bedrooms, all good size, are on the second floor. The master bedroom has its own bath and sun deck. Architect is Herman H. York, 90-04 161st St., Jamaica, N.Y. 11432. There are 952 square feet on the first floor and 953 on the second. Legislators vote themselves a $15 raise in daily expenses

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri's 197 legislators will get a $15 raise in their daily expenses if Gov. Christopher S. Bond signs a bill passed by the Senate.

After defeating an attempt to add an amendment raising the lawmakers' salaries from $8,400 to $11,500, the senators approved 18-9 Monday a bill raising their per diem expenses from $10 to $25.

Counting the $2,500 that a legislator can average in per diem expenses for a six-month session, the 10 cents a mile, and the salary of $8,400 a year, his total compensation would run to nearly $12,000 on the average.

Last week the House passed an amended Senate bill which removes the limit of 200 on the number of legislative employes and increased the lawmakers' annual pay to $12,000. The Senate refused to go along with the pay raise amendment.

In other action, the Senate defeated a bill to prohibit the use of studded snow tires from April 15 to Oct. 15.

Lyda Fritsche nominated for national recognition

CHAFFEE— Mrs. Lyda DeBerry Fritsche, an executive secretary in the Normandy School District and a former Chaffee resident, has been nominated for national recognition by the Missouri Association of Educational Secretaries.

Mrs. Fritsche, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. L.M. DeBerry, is an honor graduate of Chaffee High School and Southeast Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau.

The state secretarial group first endorsed Mrs. Fritsche for "national educational secretary of the year," and her nomination has also been endorsed by Gov. Christopher S. Bond, James A. Finch Jr., chief justice of the Missouri Supreme Court, and Arthur L. Mallory, state commissioner of education.

Mrs. Fritsche has served as executive secretary to four successive heads of the Normandy School District during the 32 years, and has been secretary to Normandy Board of Education the same number of years.

Fascination with the district's early struggles overcame an interest in studying law, Mrs. Fritsche said, noting that in 1941 the district operated on a budget of $707,000, and now has an operational budget $9,500,000.

She has encouraged secretaries to "professionalize themselves," and says that the most rewarding part of her job has been to "see progress in what we've been able to do with students."

Winner of the national title is expected to be announced later this month.

High winds wreck homes

ST. PETERS, Mo. (AP) — Tornadoes struck near several communities in eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois late Monday, but it was high winds and not tornadoes, which caused the most severe damage.

About $200,000 in damages was caused, mostly to homes which lost their roofs, the St. Louis office of the National Weather Service reported. No serious injuries resulted, although some persons were cut by flying glass, police said.

George Brancato, meteorologist in charge of the weather service, said following a survey of the damage that it was a wind storm and not a tornado that hit the Sunny Meadows subdivision in the city. A twister had been reported near the community a short time before the wind storm hit.

There were reports of tornado sightings Monday night from several communities in St. Charles, Jefferson and St. Louis counties, and in communities in the Illinois portion of the area.

Several minor traffic accidents occurred in St. Louis when motorists were forced to the side of the road during a heavy downpour.

A spokesman for Union Electric Co., said about 7,000 customers in a widely scattered area were without electric power during the height of the storm.

Two broadcasting towers were struck by lightning, forcing radio station KMOX in St. Louis off the air for about 45 minutes.
